Minor League Baseball and Local Economic Development Arthur T. Johnson, 1995 Sport including minor league baseball is an object of public policy Communities can exploit it to promote economic and social well being but not without risk Drawing on case studies of fifteen locales including Fresno Birmingham Durham Buffalo Indianapolis and Colorado Springs Arthur Johnson systematically analyzes the political process by which communities decide to invest in stadiums for minor league baseball teams He explores such factors as the presence or absence of a development strategy as a guide in decision making and the value to a community of a minor league team and its stadium Johnson also describes the dynamics of minor league baseball franchise relocation the importance of intergovernmental relations to stadium financing and the organization and business of minor league baseball including its formal relationship with major league baseball MINOR LEAGUE BASEBALL AND LOCAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. ARTHUR T. Rich, 2000-05-30 Rich and his contributing authors provide a political and economic analysis of sports stadium construction in the United States the impact it has on the sports industry itself and on the host communities in which stadiums and arenas are built The book brings together the research of leading academic analysts of sports in American society and gives a candid assessment of the claims and benefits the sports industry makes in its continuing promotion of new stadium construction Focusing on Baltimore Cleveland Chicago Boston Detroit New Orleans Toledo and Phoenix the authors examine the topic from the perspectives of history politics and economics and in doing so they raise several questions about taxpayer and community protection issues Specifically what do communities really get out of these facilities They point out that even as new and more expensive facilities are being built Congress has not provided taxpayers and cities any real protection from the risks involved in stadium investment Rich and his contributors examine how the pro stadium coalitions mobilize and explain why stadium supporters manage to win most of their construction initiatives In doing so the contributors challenge the conventional wisdom that stadiums stimulate economic development and provide good jobs On the contrary they have not lived up to the promises owners made to their host communities Neither have they generated high paying jobs nor have they met their operating costs The book concludes with ways in which sports franchise owners can be held more accountable to their communities The result is a powerful well reasoned skeptical but fair assessment of a growing phenomenon and an important resource for professionals and academics in all fields of public policy administration and urban development and management

Playing The Field Charles C. Euchner,1994-09-01 Details how owners have shamelessly played cities against one another to get sweetheart deals for their stadiums Sports Illustrated Can a sports franchise blackmail a city into getting what it wants a new stadium say or favorable leasing terms by threatening to relocate In 1982 the owners of the Chicago White Sox pledged to keep the team in Chicago if the city approved a 5 million tax exempt bond to finance construction of luxury suites at Comiskey Park The city council approved it A few years later when Comiskey Park was in need of renovation the owners threatened to move the team to Florida unless a new stadium was built A site was chosen near the old stadium property condemned residents evicted and a new stadium built We had to make threats the owners said If we didn t have the threat of moving we wouldn t have gotten the deal Sports is not a dominant industry in any city this book points out yet it receives the kind of attention one might expect to be lavished on major producers and employers In Playing the Field Charles Euchner examines the relationships between Los Angeles and the Raiders Baltimore and the Colts and the Orioles and Chicago and the White Sox arguing that in the absence of public standards for equitable arbitration between cities and teams the sports industry has the ability to steer negotiations in a way that leaves cities vulnerable He reveals what lies behind this leverage and what that says about the urban political process

Sports, Jobs, and Taxes Roger G. Noll,Andrew Zimbalist,1997-10-01 America is in the midst of a sports building boom Professional sports teams are demanding and receiving fancy new playing facilities that are heavily subsidized by government In many cases the rationale given for these subsidies is that attracting or retaining a professional sports franchise even a minor league baseball team or a major league pre season training facility more than pays for itself in increased tax revenues local economic development and job creation But are these claims true To assess the case for subsidies this book examines the economic impact of new stadiums and the presence of a sports franchise on the local economy It first explores such general issues as the appropriate method for measuring economic benefits and costs the source of the bargaining power of teams in obtaining subsidies from local government the local politics of attracting and retaining teams the relationship between sports and local employment and the importance of stadium design in influencing the economic impact of a facility The second part of the book contains case studies of major league sports facilities in Baltimore Chicago Cincinnati Cleveland Indianapolis San Francisco and the Twin Cities and of minor league stadiums and spring training facilities in baseball The primary conclusions are first sports teams and facilities are not a source of local economic growth and employment second the magnitude of the net subsidy exceeds the financial benefit of a new stadium to a team and third the most plausible reasons that cities are willing to subsidize sports teams are the intense popularity of sports among a substantial proportion of voters and businesses and the leverage that teams enjoy from the monopoly position of professional sports leagues
