

THE MINER'S LIFE

A young man to a mine did go,
Will he return - we do not know.
The sky is not above his head,
But tons of earth as for the dead.
He works in darkness all his life,
A safety lamp his only light.
When danger comes he can but run,
Not knowing when the end will come.
They criticise these courageous men,
If not by words then by the pen.
A miner's life is far from fun -
He's tired and weary when day is done.
The day will come we all well know,
When death will come as life must go.
But it must be where none can see,
They wait in death to be set free.
So remember the toil and strife,
These men endured to give us light.
Their courage makes our fires burn bright,
To warm us on cold winter nights.
God in his mercy I know will say,
With me you must always stay.
The sorrow and the tears now shed,
Are for the living of the dead.
For they will see an empty chair,
No longer their loved one is seated there.
But when you feel you're not alone,
Don't be afraid - they have come home.
You feel a gentle breeze pass by,
Sounding like a distant sigh.
Grief makes heavy a loving heart,
But love lives on though death do us part.

AMEN
