Increasing recognition of different family structures has posed dilemmas for family law and policy throughout the world. The problem often takes the form of conflicts between constitutional law or international human rights norms and between traditional forms of family association and emerging new forms of familial living. In this volume leading family lawyers chart and analyse how family law in countries with a wide variety of different backgrounds has responded to these problems. Divided into six parts, the book examines the social and demographic context, the dynamics of legal assimilation of changes in social norms, the State and pluralism, the constitutionalisation of family law, social and natural parenthood, and the reconciliation of changing norms and changing family forms. In doing this, it provides many insights into the differences and similarities between developments in western and non-western countries and the ways in which all systems seek to reconcile official law and ideology with social behaviour.

Slavic Themes Boris Christa, 1988      A Critical Analysis of the Zimbabwe's Electoral Laws in Relation to SADC's Principles and Guidelines G. Feltoe, 2006      New Zealand Books in Print, 1976      The Maori Magna Carta Paul G. McHugh, 1991. This account of the law surrounding the Treaty of Waitangi not only considers the constitutional nature of the relationship between Maori and Parliament but also describes the legislative activities of the New Zealand Parliament regarding Maori, the role of the Waitangi Tribunal and the laws affecting Maori land tenure. It addresses basic issues of constitutional law and theory including the legal aspects of the Crown's colonization of New Zealand, progressing to consider issues of contemporary relevance such as common law aboriginal title, the developing rules of international law and the legal doctrine of the Crown's fiduciary duty.
