The Lyric Impulse Cecil Day Lewis, 1965 No detailed description available for The Lyric Impulse Intention and Unintention Or the Hyperconscious in Contemporary Lyric Impulse Grant Caldwell, 2018-02-22 The question of how lyric poetry is written especially in the moment when it first arrives with a poet is vexed Grant Caldwell's discussion of the hyperconscious and of poetic unintentionality in the contemporary lyric impulse constitutes an original contribution to knowledge in this field Caldwell's analysis of individual poems is sophisticated His discussion of Myron Lysenko's poem is especially convincing His meditation on Frank O'Hara's methods of poetic composition and on one of his poems is both insightful and original making it clear how hyperconsciousness and unintentionality has many sometimes surprising manifestations Paul Hetherington Grant Caldwell's argument travels via Freud through key poetic illustrations of the terrain Discussions of T.S. Eliot's theory of the need for the escape from personality and Keats' negative capability build towards the illumination of Caldwell's poet paradox and the contribution of other writers Kafka especially enriches this discussion The discussion of Frank O'Hara's extraordinarily social version of this as a kind of limit case is a highlight Most impressive is the intuitive and informed exploration of the ways the poet must enter as Caldwell argues paradoxical spaces drawing both on focus and its antithesis deep self awareness and an escape from self Caldwell works at a cusp where the ineffable meets the explicable He takes on the large question of the orientation of a poet and what makes the person who becomes a poet what s/he does This refined and elegant work is an engaging and original contribution to discussions of the terrain Felicity Plunkett

Living in Time Albert Gelpi, 1998 Albert Gelpi explores in three expansive sections the major periods of the poet's development beginning with the emergence of Day Lewis in the thirties as the most radical of the Oxford poets An artist who sought through poetry a way of living in time without traditional religious assurances Day Lewis went further than his friends in seeking to forge a revolutionary poetry out of his commitment to Marxism When Stalinism led to his resignation from the Communist Party Day Lewis in the forties went on to shape a rich fiercely perceptive poetry out of the convergence of the wartime crisis with the explosive events of his own inner life intensified by the erotics of a decade long affair American Lyrics, 1912 Northern Lyrics Frederick G. Bowles, 1903 Shakespearean Metadrama James L. Calderwood, 1971-03-10 Shakespearean Metadrama was first published in 1971 Minnesota Archive Editions uses digital technology to make long unavailable books once again accessible and are published unaltered from the original University of Minnesota Press editions In a new approach to Shakespeare criticism the author interprets five of Shakespeare's early plays as metadramas dramas that are not only about the various moral social political and other thematic issues with which critics have so long been concerned but also about the plays themselves Professor Calderwood demonstrates that in these five plays Shakespeare writes about his dramatic art its nature its media of language and theater its generic forms and conventions its relationship to truth and the social order In an introductory chapter the author explains his theory of metadrama placing it in a general critical context as well as in the specific framework of Shakespeare's plays. He distinguishes between the meaning of metadrama and the similar terms metaplay and metatheatricality. He points out that the dominant metadramatic aspect of the five plays under study is the interplay of language and action in drama. A separate chapter is devoted to the interpretation of each of the plays. Professor Calderwood is aware that in presenting his critical theory and interpretations he may be met with skepticism by other scholars and critics. He anticipates such a situation in the introduction. To the critic trying on introductory styles for a book on Shakespearean metadrama, he writes the plight of Falstaff at the Boar's Head Tavern comes all too readily to mind. What trick he must ask himself what device what starting hole canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame.

C. Day-Lewis: The Golden Bridle Albert Gelpi, Bernard O'Donoghue, 2018-01-26 C Day Lewis was a major figure in British poetry and culture from the 1930s until his death in 1972. The Golden Bridle: Selected Prose takes its title from the myth of Bellerophon and the golden bridle of Pegasus which Day Lewis invoked on several occasions as a metaphor for the creative process. Day Lewis as poet is then the organizing idea of this anthology and the selections indicate the scope and range of his vital engagement with English life and letters. Organised into four parts, the volume illustrates Day Lewis's reflections on the role and function of poetry in society and culture, the creative process and the workings of the imagination as well as the nature of poetic truth and its relation to science, poets who were of particular importance to Day Lewis and the poetic process in relation to the composition of several of his own poems. The notes indicate the particular source, circumstances and central issues of each piece to provide a brief intellectual biography and critical account of this eminent poet's development and standing.
