Trilogy Prudence MacGregor, 2012-12 Trilogy A Collection is comprised of three stories all of which have an otherworldly paranormal theme to them Each of the main characters in these stories wrestles with extraordinary circumstances in an otherwise ostensibly ordinary world All of the tales have their own moral and life lessons which Prudence MacGregor aims for each reader to individually formulate as life itself is not clear cut and is at the mercy of the subjective Journey with the stories main characters as they navigate the unplumbed depths of the unknown The first story Parallelograms centers on protagonist Justine a determined yet troubled young woman who quite by accident discovers that she has a double and thus finds herself facing unexpected and ultimately terrifying consequences Her previously tightly controlled world spins out of control causing her to question her very existence The second story in the trilogy Random concerns Ulyssa a young woman who is intrigued by the possibility of releasing a balloon with a note and seeing where it lands This seemingly innocent activity will take her down a dark path the circumstances of which may or may not be resolved This will conflict with the outwardly picture perfect world that she thought she inhabited The final title Up There focuses on Gregory an unassuming office worker who is fascinated by the airplanes he sees in the sky Quite by accident he meets Sherry a beautiful motivational speaker who just may have a connection to one of the planes he has seen

An activity he previously saw as harmless and a bit innocuous watching planes fly overhead and guessing their destinations turns questionable and ultimately forces him to take a look at his world is it real or has it always been an illusion
