Nordic Airpower:

Nordic Airpower Jan Jørgensen, 1993 Om flyvev benet i Danmark Finland Island Norge og Sverige Nordic Airpower, 2010 European Air Power John Andreas Olsen, 2014-07-15 European Air Power examines the current state of eight separate European air forces and their prospective air power capabilities in a manner that will appeal to a wide audience of air force enthusiasts. Included are perspectives from independent air power experts reviewing the air forces of France, Germany, Turkey and Great Britain as well as from the leaders of the air forces of the Nordic nations including Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Finland. Within the national security framework of threats and challenges and against the seemingly universal backdrop of lower budgets for defense the contributors present varying views on the types of air power capability a state should have and those it does not need. The contributors consider each air force separately and how each is structured to remain sustainable and efficient in accordance with its national strategic infrastructure Civil Airworthiness

Towards a New Era? Per Erik Solli, 2022 Flight Test System Identification Roger Larsson, 2019-05-15. With the demand for more advanced fighter aircraft relying on unstable flight mechanical characteristics to gain flight performance, more focus has been put on model based system engineering to help with the design work. The flight control system design is one important part that relies on this modeling. Therefore it has become more important to develop flight mechanical models that are highly accurate in the whole flight envelope. For today's modern fighter aircraft the basic flight mechanical characteristics change between linear and nonlinear as well as stable and unstable as an effect of the desired capability of advanced maneuvering at subsonic, transonic and supersonic speeds. This thesis combines the subject of system identification which is the art of building mathematical models of dynamical systems based on measurements with aeronautical engineering in order to find methods for identifying flight mechanical characteristics. Here some challenging aeronautical identification problems estimating model parameters from flight testing are treated. Two aspects are considered. The first is online identification during flight testing with the intent to aid the engineers in the analysis process when looking at the flight mechanical characteristics. This will also ensure that enough information is available in the resulting test data for post flight analysis. Here a frequency domain method is used. An existing method has been developed further by including an Instrumental Variable approach to take care of noisy data including atmospheric turbulence and by a sensor fusion step to handle varying excitation during an experiment. The method treats linear systems that can be both stable and unstable working under feedback control. An experiment has been performed on a radio controlled demonstrator aircraft. For this multisine input signals have been designed and the results show that it is possible to perform more time efficient flight testing compared with standard input signals. The other aspect is post flight identification of nonlinear characteristics. Here the properties of a parameterized observer approach using a prediction error method are investigated. This approach is compared with four other methods for some test cases. It is shown that this parameterized observer approach is the most robust one with respect to noise disturbances and initial offsets. Another attractive property is that no user parameters have to be tuned by the engineers in order to get the best performance. All methods in this thesis have been validated on simulated data where the system is known and have also been tested on real flight test data. Both of the investigated approaches show promising results.

Process and Problems in Developing NATO Tactical Air Doctrine David J. Stein, Rand Corporation, 1988
Understanding the interests and tactics of our allies is important to improving cooperation with the Tactical Air Working Party of NATO. This Note examines the administrative processes and competing influences involved in negotiating statements of NATO's tactical air doctrine including the joint process for developing U.S. positions on NATO air doctrine and the combined process by which national proposals eventually emerge as formal NATO doctrine. The Note reviews the air power interests of Great Britain and West Germany and their influence on the development of NATO air doctrine. The authors make tentative suggestions for enhancing the U.S. position in negotiations over allied air power issues.
