Topic: Religion | Words: 311 | Pages: 1

Religion has been important and influential in people's lives for a long time. Emile Durkheim's The Elementary Forms of Religious Life explores religion's essence and role by studying its primitive form. The author chose the study of archaic religion because he believes it will best reveal people and their religious nature. Durkheim (1995) is confident that such a religion reflects the reality. The author put forward two requirements for choosing a religion: it must be present in a simple society, and when explaining it, there is no need to refer to earlier beliefs. Such religion and its rites should express the needs in people's lives that they sought to fill through it. In later and more complex religions, the influence of many other beliefs and cultures is intertwined. Such an impact should not exist in a simple society; therefore, their religion should reflect the beginning and essence of religious thought. These ideas cover the study rationale and are presented in the introduction.

To achieve the goals set and avoid uncertainty in subsequent reflections, the author proposes a definition of religion in the first chapter. Durkheim (1995) emphasizes that religion is a social phenomenon that reflects collective realities in the book's introduction. In chapter 1, gradually considering the concepts one can use to explain religion, the author reflects on its characteristics and components. For example, often, religions can be described as something supernatural or related to God. However, Durkheim (1995) concludes that the supernatural is not an original concept and notes that not all religions have gods. Focusing on other aspects, he identifies the definition of religion as a unified system of beliefs and practices within a moral society (Church)

The Elementary Forms of the Religious Life Emile Durkheim, 2016-09-01 In this book we propose to study the most primitive and simple religion which is actually known to make an analysis of it and to attempt an explanation of it A religious system may be said to be the most primitive which we can observe when it fulfils the two following conditions in the first place when it is found in a society whose organization is surpassed by no others in simplicity and secondly when it is possible to explain it without making use of any element borrowed from a previous religion We shall set ourselves to describe the organization of this system with all the exactness and fidelity that an ethnographer or an historian could give it But our task will not be limited to that sociology raises other problems than history or ethnography It does not seek to know the passed forms of civilization with the sole end of knowing them and reconstructing them But rather like every positive science it has as its object the explanation of some actual reality which is near to us and which consequently is capable of affecting our ideas and our acts this reality is man and more precisely the man of to day for there is nothing which we are more interested in knowing Then we are not going to study a very archaic religion simply for the pleasure of telling its peculiarities and its singularities If we have taken it as the subject of our research it is because it has seemed to us better adapted than any other to lead to an understanding of the religious nature of man that is to say to show us an essential and permanent aspect of humanity in history be it a religious belief a moral precept a legal principle an aesthetic style or an economic system it is necessary to commence by going back to its most primitive and simple form to try to account for the characteristics by which it was marked at that time and then to show how it developed and became complicated little by little and how it became that which it is at the moment in question If we are going to look for the most primitive and simple religion which we can observe it is necessary to begin by defining what is meant by a religion for without this we would run the risk of giving the name to a system of ideas and practices which has nothing at all religious about it or else of leaving to one side many religious facts without perceiving their true nature
