On Reflection A Workable Relief:

The Paradoxes of Aid Work Silke Roth, 2015-03-24 This book explores what attracts people to aidwork and to what extent the promises of aidwork are fulfilled Aidland is a highly complex and heterogeneous context which includes many different occupations forms of employment and organizations Analysing the processes that lead to the involvement in development cooperation emergency relief and human rights work and tracing the pathways into and through Aidland the book addresses working and living conditions in Aidland gender relations and inequality among aid personnel and what impact aidwork has on the life courses of aidworkers In order to capture the trajectories that lead to Aidland a biographical perspective is employed which reveals that boundary crossing between development cooperation emergency relief and human rights is not unusual and that considering these fields as separate spheres might overlook important connections Rich reflexive data is used to theorize about the often contradictory experiences of people working in aid whose careers are shaped by geo politics changing priorities of donors and a changing composition of the aid sector Exploring the life worlds of people working in aid this book contributes to the emerging sociology and anthropology of aidwork and will be of interest to professionals and researchers in humanitarian and development studies sociology anthropology political science and international relations international social work and social psychology Social Security Bulletin ,1941 Journal of the American Water Works Association

American Water Works Association,1919 Vols for 2012 contain only executive summaries of articles The Personal and the Professional in Aid Work Anne-Meike Fechter,2016-03-16 This book considers how the personal and the professional dimensions are related and how they matter for aid work The contributions to this edited volume are based on the assumption that all actors are relevant in development including national and international aid workers A key question which the book explores is why the personal so often remains unacknowledged in development studies even though its salience for aid workers is well documented One possible reason is an implicit narrative of aid work as altruistic and self sacrificing which renders it inappropriate to devote much attention to the experiences of development professionals themselves In order to redress this this book critically considers the kind of difference they make and aims to understand how they respond to the challenges of their work The book explores their efficacy as human beings and employees with individual subjectivities social and cultural beliefs and practices and documents how these shape their involvement in development processes This book was published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly Social Work, Critical

Reflection and the Learning Organization Mark Baldwin,2016-04-01 A critical characteristic of human service organizations is their capacity to learn from experience and to adapt continuously to changing external conditions such as downward pressure on resources constant reconfiguration of the welfare state and rapidly changing patterns of social need This invaluable groundbreaking volume discusses in detail the concept of the learning organization in particular its relevance to social work and social services Contributors join together from across Europe North America and Australia to explore the development of the learning organization within social work contexts and its use as a strategic tool for meeting problems of continuous learning supervision and change The volume addresses a range of important topics from strategies for embedding learning and critical reflection in the social work learning organization to the implications of the learning organization for the new community based health and social care agenda On Reflection Gilleasbuig Macmillan, Gilleasbuig, 1993 Is the art of preaching dead This book belongs to a series of books which intend to show that far from being moribund the tradition of preaching is alive and well Included in this text are the author s reflections on the Apostles Creed and its usefulness to Christian people like the usefulness of wooden posts to travellers in the snow providing practical indicators for that journey of faith Parliamentary Papers Great Britain.
