The Pros and Cons of Ability Grouping Warren George Findley, Miriam M. Bryan, 1975    Subject Catalog Library of Congress, 1976    Beyond Schooling Eugene W. Kelly, 1982 Education occurs in many diverse settings but the achievement of individual societal professional and vocational corporate and cultural and leisure goals is hindered by lack of interrelatedness among educating units Duplication of educational efforts wastes resources discontinuity of educational experiences impedes learning and fragmentation of educating units results in unmet educational needs The broad concept of education should be turned into a practical reality In this reality educating units from all sectors would be productively connected in a broad and comprehensive system of education In such a system individual educating units would continue to pursue their special goals but would also relate to and collaborate with other units in achieving all educational goals Coordinated efforts would result in direct support and collaboration among diverse educating units The system would not be a hierarchy bureaucracy government or private institution but would have sufficient structure to afford continuity in communication collaboration coordination and problem solving JD    The Alternative School Choice, 1991    Legal Issues in Education of the Handicapped Donald G. Turner, 1983 This booklet looks at selected recent court cases dealing with a number of questions regarding P L 94 142 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 1 What is meant by free appropriate education 2 Which services are considered related services and thus obligatory upon schools 3 What procedural protections must be available when parents disagree with school district employees concerning classification initial placement or changes in placement of handicapped children 4 What happens to the children while disputes are being heard 5 If the school district can't provide an appropriate educational program must it or may it contract with an outside agency or institution 6 When must the school district rather than the parents pay for such outside programs 7 What special provisions if any must be made for disciplinary measures used with handicapped children From the cases the author extracts guidelines educators may find helpful in attempting to meet the educational needs of handicapped children within the parameters established by law The author concludes that the ultimate question educators must ask themselves is whether it is too expensive to provide the handicapped their due rights JM    How Schools Can Apply Systems Analysis Joseph E. Hill, 1972

Management by Objectives in the Schools Robert Richard Spillane, Dorothy Levenson, 1978    Monographic Series Library of Congress, 1975    Title IX Frank D. Aquila, 1981 This publication divided into five sections reviews Title IX regulations and provides interpretations to help educators achieve educational equity in their schools An overview of Title IX regulations discusses persons covered by the legislation admission and recruitment policies treatment of students and employment practices The second section presents answers to basic questions about Title IX The third section contains illustrative situations stating problems status and recommendations for practices regarding compliance employment policies pregnancy athletics access to courses honors and awards differential treatment admissions policies physical education and counseling materials A legal update on Title IX citing several legal cases is given in the fourth section The fifth section contains suggestions for administrators CJ

Legal Implications of Minimum Competency Testing Joseph Beckham, 1980 The legal implications of state mandated minimum competency testing are assessed Many state constitutions establish education as an individual's right Court decisions have required school systems to provide educational services to every child who can benefit from them implying equality of access to these services When a minimum competency testing program has the effect of denying an educational benefit then it can be argued that the testing program denies equality of educational opportunity violating the Fourteenth Amendment Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 or Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 Minimum competency testing statutes may violate standards of due process where an educational benefit has been denied and state action is judged to be arbitrary or lacking in fundamental fairness However courts have been reluctant to overturn state action where minimal elements of due process have been provided Provision of clear educational objectives is necessary to establish the relationship between curriculum and the competency standard but objectives may create a legal duty of care permitting a lawsuit based upon breach of duty to educate Procedural safeguards for a testing program will vary according to state law but a number of guidelines are suggested GK
