

A close-up, high-angle view of an Eastern Orthodox icon of Christ Pantocrator. The figure is shown in a three-quarter profile, looking down and to the right. He has a serene expression with a slight smile. His skin is a pale yellowish-tan color. He wears a dark, textured monastic-style garment. A red sash or ribbon is tied in a knot on his chest. A red cross is visible on his chest. His right hand is held in a gesture of blessing, with the thumb and index finger touching. His left hand is partially visible, holding a book. The background is a light, textured surface, possibly a wall or a piece of wood. The lighting is soft, highlighting the contours of his face and hands.

Black Political Activism and the Cuban Republic Melina Pappademos, 2011-09-19 While it was not until 1871 that slavery in Cuba was finally abolished African descended people had high hopes for legal social and economic advancement as the republican period started In Black Political Activism and the Cuban Republic Melina Pappademos analyzes the racial politics and culture of black civic and political activists during the Cuban Republic The path to equality Pappademos reveals was often stymied by successive political and economic crises patronage politics and profound racial tensions In the face of these issues black political leaders and members of black social clubs developed strategies for expanding their political authority and for winning respectability and socioeconomic resources Rather than appeal to a monolithic black Cuban identity based on the assumption of shared experience these black activists politicians and public intellectuals consistently recognized the class cultural and ideological differences that existed within the black community thus challenging conventional wisdom about black community formation and anachronistic ideas of racial solidarity Pappademos illuminates the central yet often silenced intellectual and cultural role of black Cubans in the formation of the nation's political structures in doing so she shows that black activism was only partially motivated by race

Bacardi and the Long Fight for Cuba Tom Gjelten, 2008-09-04 In this widely hailed book NPR correspondent Tom Gjelten fuses the story of the Bacardi family and their famous rum business with Cuba's tumultuous experience over the last 150 years to produce a deeply entertaining historical narrative The company Facundo Bacardi launched in Cuba in 1862 brought worldwide fame to the island and in the decades that followed his Bacardi descendants participated in every aspect of Cuban life With his intimate account of their struggles and adventures across five generations Gjelten brings to life the larger story of Cuba's fight for freedom its tortured relationship with America the rise of Fidel Castro and the violent division of the Cuban nation
