Orchestral Music A Source:

Orchestral Music David Daniels,1972    Classical Music Futures Neil Thomas Smith,Peter Peters,Karoly Molina,2024-01-30 This volume brings together contributions from a wide range of international academics and practitioners It traces innovations within classical music practice showing how these offer divergent visions for its future The interdisciplinary contributions to the volume highlight the way contrasting ideas of the future can effect change in the present A rich balance of theoretical and practical discussion brings authority to this collection which lays the foundations for timely responses to challenges ranging from the concept of the musical work and the colonial values within Western musical culture to unsustainable models of orchestral touring The authors highlight how labour to meet the demands of particular futures for classical music might impact its creation and consumption presenting case studies to capture the mediating roles of technology and community engagement This book will be of interest to scholars and students in the fields of musicology and the sociology of music as well as a general audience of practitioners freelance musicians music administrators and educators    Symphonic Program Music and Its Literary Sources Lawrence Casler,2001 Based on specific literary resources this book provides information on over 260 pieces of orchestral program music up to 1950 Each entry consists of an account of relevant aspects of the author's and composer's life and about the relationship between the music and its source

Havergal Brian and the Performance of His Orchestral Music Lewis Foreman,1976    The National Music of America and Its Sources Louis Charles Elson,1899    Performing French Classical Music Timothy Schultz,2001 This book discusses what both early and modern sources say about French performance practice and offers solutions to performance problems in Francois Chauvon's Premierre Suite taken from Tibiades 1717 Part one discusses relevant issues of historical performance practice and establishes a context    Richard Wagner and the Style of the Music Drama Wilbur Fiske Stone,1897    The American Music Teacher ,2006    Orchestral music. v. 1. Berlin symphonies Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach,2005    Musical Magazine and Musical Courier ,1902    Source Separation Methods for Orchestral Music Marius Miron,2017 Humans are able to distinguish between various sound sources in their environment and selectively attend to specific ones However it is a difficult task to teach a computer to automatically separate the acoustic scene into sources and solely focus on specific elements This signal processing task is commonly known as audio source separation and involves recovering the sources which are mixed together in a combined signal This thesis is concerned with source separation of Western classical music mixtures namely orchestral music Being able to separate the audio corresponding to the instruments allows for interesting applications such as focusing on a particular section in the orchestra or re-creating the experience of a concert in virtual reality Additionally the separated instrument tracks can be further analyzed by other music information research algorithms which perform better on these signals than on the audio signal of the mixture Music source separation improves if we know which instruments are present in the piece and if we have the score e g the notes played by each instrument In fact the more information we have about a music piece the better the resulting separation For orchestral music the instruments are known and we train timbre models for each instrument a case commonly known as timbre informed source separation In addition since scores are commonly available for orchestral pieces we leverage this information to further improve the separation This scenario is known in literature as score informed source separation Towards an objective evaluation in the second part of the thesis we propose an orchestral music dataset accompanied by score annotations and an evaluation methodology which assesses the influence of difference parts of the separation framework In the third part of the thesis our contributions are towards fixing context specific problems encountered in score informed source separation like the errors in the alignment between a score and the associated renditions Furthermore while we work towards improve existing separation frameworks in the fourth part of the thesis we propose a low latency framework relying on deep learning With respect to that we aim at overcoming data scarcity in the case of supervised source separation approaches by taking advantage of the traits of this music tradition to generate better data to train neural networks In addition in the fifth part we introduce a cloud based source separation software architecture and the associated applications Most of this work follows the research reproducibility principles inasmuch the datasets code software prototypes published papers and project reports are made available along with the necessary instructions
