It was the purpose of this study to gather information concerning the status of the mathematical preparation of high school seniors in Wyoming and to determine the mathematics necessary for entrance into University of Wyoming programs.

At the time of the study, Wyoming had 73 public high schools; the number of seniors enrolled in these schools ranged from 597 to 5,111. These schools were divided into five types (Table 1) based upon senior class size. Forty-seven of these schools were selected for inclusion in the study using an intact-groups modification of the stratified random sampling technique employed by the various studies of the Wyoming Educational Needs Assessment Program.¹ The object of the technique was to identify a sample which included at least 60 percent of all Wyoming seniors and which was comprised of 60 percent of the seniors in each of the five types of schools. In fact, the sample selected included 70 percent of the senior population. Because "whole schools" were selected and a minimum representation of 60 percent was desired, the actual percents for the five schools types ranged from 62 (Type IV) to 76 (Type I).

A school's agreement to participate in the study meant that a named person would complete a general information form about the school and would administer the survey instrument to all seniors in the school using written directions and definitions provided by the investigators. It should be noted that many schools administered the survey selectively rather than to all seniors as requested. The schools engaging in such "selective" administration reported using the instrument only with seniors currently enrolled in mathematics classes.

It was hoped that the selection procedures described above would ensure returns which included at least 60 percent of the seniors in each of the five types of schools. Returns were received from 40 of the 47 schools; the 2910 individual respondents represented a response rate of 45 percent of the original sample of 4477 seniors and 37 percent of the total population of 6380 seniors.

Math Fun Norman Santora,2000-01-01 The exercises in this Math Fun book were designed to instill in the children a good healthy feeling for math By teaching the mathematical basis for playing games and doing puzzles the author anticipates that the children will have a feeling of power and fun as they defeat their elders and playmates This experience should give them an appreciation for the source of this power namely mathematics Finally it is his hope that the beauty of mathematics its logic and symmetry and pattern will become apparent to the students Another goal in this book is to teach children a variety of problem solving techniques and to try to convince them to be prepared to look at a problem with an open mind by taking advantage of isomorphism for example
