Beocoff,Joshua Bagby,1991-12-12 Every year vast amounts of money are wasted by publishers and authors who make errors in managing their book projects because they don't understand the publishing process and how the key players should interact. This book reveals how to make better choices and more money by improving the work flow for each participant in the publishing chain and delivering what the end user needs. This is the first book to focus on the process on understanding the system of publishing in order to make informed timely decisions that reduce costs and increase sales. Written by experienced publishing professionals this practical book helps an individual make better writing, editing, design, production and marketing choices by taking into account the realities of the book industry. This storehouse of valuable information on roles and responsibilities, sales based decision making and improved workflow efficiency helps both new and seasoned publishers develop a book that meets industry standards and flows through the proper distribution channels. Forms, charts and checklists for crucial decision making along with an invaluable list of the 235 most common publishing mistakes are included.

Publishers' circular and booksellers' record, 1897    Make Your Own Book Verna McCoy, 2016-06-14

Most people equate writing a book with writing a novel which is a fiction story. This is not the case when it comes to writing especially writing today. There is a very big market for non fiction books as well. Cookbooks, how to books, motivational books and biographies are all examples of non fiction books that sell very well and are often self published.
