Oradour Massacre And After:

The Collaborator Sandra Nina Kaplan, 2001 Across the Face of France James Alvin Huston, 1963 The author who fought across France with the 134th infantry follows the approximate liberation route as he revisits the towns decades later This book is a combination of military and political history meditation on the tragic predicament of humanity and an affectionate portrayal of the French and their country Oradour Robin Mackness, 2012-03-30 A True and Wholly Engrossing Tale of High Finance and Treachery in Which the Secret of a Wartime Tragedy is Revealed Through a Contemporary Drama On 10th June 1944 four days after the Allied invasion of Normandy the inhabitants of a remote village in South West France were rounded up by a company of SS soldiers and all but a handful were shot or burnt to death 642 in total The atrocity and its particularly disturbing details have never been adequately explained until now In 1982 Robin Mackness met the one man left alive who held the knowledge which made terrible sense of the massacre Five further years of thorough investigations convinced the author that he had discovered the true secret of Oradour It cost him twenty one months in prison and much else besides The Hidden Histories of War Crimes Trials Kevin Heller, Gerry Simpson, 2013-10-31 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 3 0 International licence It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations Several instances of war crimes trials are familiar to all scholars but in order to advance understanding of the development of international criminal law it is important to provide a full range of evidence from less familiar trials This book therefore provides an essential resource for a more comprehensive overview uncovering and exploring some of the lesser known war crimes trials that have taken place in a variety of contexts international and domestic northern and southern historic and contemporary It analyses these trials with a view to recognising institutional innovations clarifying doctrinal debates and identifying their general relevance to contemporary international criminal law At the same time the book recognises international criminal law s history of suppression or sublimation What stories has the discipline refused to tell What stories have been displaced by the ones it has told Has international criminal law s framing or telling of these stories excluded other possibilities And perhaps most important of all how can recovering the lost stories and imagining new narrative forms reconfigure the discipline Many of the trials examined in this book have hardly ever before been discussed others have been examined only in the most cursory manner Indeed until now no volume has been dedicated to telling the story of these trials that have yet to find a place in the international criminal law canon Providing a detailed analysis of these trials which took place in Europe Africa South America and Australasia in both historical and contemporary contexts this book is essential reading for anyone concerned with the development of international criminal law Oradour-The Final Verdict Douglas W. Hawes, 2007-04-11 Relying on multiple eye witness accounts and thorough research in French American and Resistance archives the author describes in Part I hour by hour the massacre on June 10 1944 by the Waffen SS Division Das Reich of 642 men women and children in the village of Oradour sur Glane and the destruction of the village Who ordered the massacre Why The book puts the tragedy in the context of the D Day Landing and the period that precedes it Part II is devoted to the conduct of the trial nearly nine years later Of the 21 accused only 7 were Germans The others all French Alsatians had mostly been forcibly inducted into the SS None were officers Were the Alsatians victims or murderers And why were there no officers in the courtroom Oradour - the Final Verdict Douglas W. Nazis, Decent People, and Propagandists John Paul Teschke, 1995 Martyred Village Sarah Bennett Farmer, 1999 Among German crimes of the Second World War the Nazi massacre of 642 men women and children at Oradour sur Glane on June 10 1944 is one of the most notorious On that Saturday afternoon four days after the Allied landings in Normandy SS troops encircled the town in the rolling farm country of the Limousin Soldiers marched the men to nearby barns lined them up and shot them They then locked the women and children in the church shot them and set the building and the rest of the town on fire Residents who had been away for the day returned to a blackened scene of horror carnage and devastation In 1946 the French State expropriated and preserved the entire ruins of Oradour The forty acres of crumbling houses farms and shops became France's village martyr set up as a monument to French suffering under the German occupation. Today the village is a tourist destination complete with maps and guidebooks. In this first full scale study of the destruction of Oradour and its remembrance over the half century since the war Sarah Farmer investigates the prominence of the massacre in French understanding of the national experience under German domination. Through interviews with survivors and village officials as well as extensive archival research she pieces together a fascinating history of both a shattering event and its memorial afterlife. Complemented by haunting photographs of the site Farmer's eloquent dissection of France's national memory addresses the personal and private ways in which through remembrance people try to come to terms with enormous loss. Martyred Village will have implications for the study of the history and sociology of memory testimonies about remembrances of war and the Holocaust and postmodern concerns with the presentation of the past. Insiders and Outliers Gordon Wright, 1980 Insiders & outliers A Procession of Frenchmen Gordon Wright, 1980 Recasting Postcolonialism Anne Donadey, 2001 This book analyzes works of Assia Djebar and Leïla Sebbar in context of postcolonial theory and French Algerian history literature and visual arts. Wanted: Nazi Criminals at Large Alan Levy, 1962 Picture Post, 1953 Secret Intelligence and the Holocaust David Bankier, 2006 The ultimate proof of the ongoing massacre of the Jews and how the Allies found out. Massacre at Oradour, France, 1944 Jean-Jacques Fouché, David Sices, James B. Atkinson, 2005 Near the end of World War II four days after Allied armies landed at Normandy a unit of Waffen SS troops en route to that front surrounded the French village of Oradour sur Glane and without warning systematically massacred its citizens. The Nazi soldiers herded women and children into the village church machine gunned them and set the church on fire while some were still alive. The men were taken to barns in groups where they were shot. Afterward the Nazis plundered the village and burned it to the ground. Altogether more than 640 men, women and children died in Oradour that day. Jean Jacques Fouch explores the massacre from several points of view: religious or ethnic differences, the background and training of the Nazi soldiers and German suspicions that villagers sheltered Jewish and Spanish anti fascist refugees. Probing the most shocking massacre in World War II France he shows how memory affects our understanding of the past. Police Drugs Jean Rolin, 1956 The Journal of Historical Review David McCalden, Theodore J. O'Keefe, 1982
