Optics For Technology Students:

Optics for Technology Students Robert O. Naess, 2000-04 The primary objective of this text is to present the fundamental concepts of optics to readers having little or no prior training in the subject Wherever it seemed appropriate the concepts have been more rigorously presented in order to make understanding more complete The secondary aim of the text is to encourage the use of personal computers and inexpensive programmable calculators to relieve the student of much of the drudgery of repetitive calculations when seeking solutions for the complicated algebraic equations used in optics This will enable the mindset of the students to go immediately from input parameters to the results thereby enhancing the learning process
