Making A Place:

Making Place Stephan Feuchtwang, 2012-09-10 To make a place is to create a location where its creators can feel they belong Processes of place making are still very much ongoing today Geographers sociologists political scientists and philosophers of advanced capitalism have said that place is a localisation of the global However the creation of a place is not legible from such grand perspectives It is also much more creative than can be predicted by translating large scale processes into local cultures Anthropologists have been sensitive to the intimate tragic and lyrical senses of local place But their theorising has been too much bound up with cosmology and insufficiently with the intermediate scales of state and local state In this book Stephan Feuchtwang and his contributors offer a set of historical anthropological and scale mediated studies from China a country that includes a subcontinental variety of cultures and landscapes In the twentieth century it experienced collapse in civil war and was then reasserted as a particularly strong state Now it is managing the fastest growing capitalist economy in the world These intriguing Chinese studies contribute to the anthropology of place and space providing an historical perspective on processes of change and of accommodation to disruption The stories they tell are fascinating in their own right but in addition the result is a critical reformulation of previous theories of place that geographers philosophers historians and anthropologists will find of great interest

Making Place, Making Self Inger Birkeland, 2017-03-02 Making Place Making Self explores new understandings of place and place making in late modernity covering key themes of place and space tourism and mobility sexual difference and subjectivity Using a series of individual life stories it develops a fascinating polyvocal account of leisure and life journeys These stories focus on journeys made to the North Cape in Norway the most northern point of mainland Europe which is both a tourist destination and an evocation of a reliable and secure point of reference an idea that gives meaning to an individual's life The theoretical core of the book draws on an interweaving of post Lacanian versions of feminist psychoanalytical thinking with phenomenological and existential thinking where place making is linked with self making and homecoming By combining such ground breaking theory with her innovative use of case studies Inger Birkeland here provides a major contribution to the fields of cultural geography tourism and feminist studies

Making Place for Muslims in Contemporary India Kalyani Devaki Menon, 2022-05-15 Making Place for Muslims in Contemporary India looks at how religion provides an arena to make place and challenge the majoritarian exclusionary and introverted tendencies of contemporary India Places do not simply exist They are made and remade by the acts of individuals and communities at particular historical moments In India today the place for Muslims is shrinking as the revanchist Hindu Right increasingly realizes its vision of a Hindu nation Religion enables Muslims to reenvision India as a different kind of place one to which they unquestionably belong Analyzing the religious narratives practices and constructions of religious subjectivity of diverse groups of Muslims in Old Delhi Kalyani Devaki Menon reveals the ways in which Muslims variously contest the insular and singular understandings of nation that dominate the sociopolitical landscape of the country and make place for themselves Menon shows how religion is concerned not just with the divine and transcendental but also with the anxieties and aspirations of people living amid violence exclusion and differential citizenship Ultimately Making Place for Muslims in Contemporary India allows us to understand religious acts narratives and constructions of self and belonging as material forces as forms of the political that can make room for individuals communities and alternative imaginings in a world besieged by increasingly xenophobic understandings of nation and place Risku v.
