Jacqueline Mroz takes on the science of female friendship a phenomenon that is as culturally powerful as it is individually mysterious. She examines friendship from a range of angles from the historical to the experiential with a scientific analysis that reveals new truths about what leads us to connect and build alliances and then break up when a friendship no longer serves us. Mroz takes a new look at how friendship has evolved throughout history showing how friends tend to share more genetic commonalities than strangers and that the more friends we have the more empathy and pleasure chemicals are present in our brains. Scientists have also reported that friendship directly influences health and longevity: women with solid supportive friendships experience fewer fight or flight impulses and stronger heart function and women without friendships tend to develop medical challenges on par with those associated with smoking and excessive body weight. With intimate reporting and insightful analysis, Mroz reveals new awareness about the impact of women's friendships and how they shape our culture at large.

Community-based Media Pedagogies Bronwen Low, Paula Salvio, Chloe Brushwood Rose, 2016-10-04 Participatory media is a tool for individual and community education and development allowing students to express and share their ideas and opinions and to contribute to the production of the commons. Vital to the storytelling in these community spaces is listening: the listening of project facilitators to participants, of participants to each other, and of the public to the stories that emerge through these projects. Community-based Media Pedagogies examines the role of listening across community media sites to explore its relational qualities and to identify the kinds of teaching and learning that happen in these spaces. Drawing on community media projects and pedagogies across New York, Toronto, and Montreal, this volume documents the stories of racialized and marginalized minority youth and immigrants and explores which relations and spaces facilitate listening.

New to the Second Edition: 10 new chapters on the nature of change, critical thinking, culturally informed care, and preparing for the counseling relationship; a new case illustration and three new tools; a new Foreword by Sue Hale; MCD reorganized for improved flow of information with earlier introduction of the central framework followed by chapters to build foundational knowledge and skills. The central framework for counseling has been simplified and reconfigured for easier integration into clinical practice. Based on user feedback, the theory chapters from the first edition have been dropped to make room for the added knowledge.
