Merovingian Mortuary Archaeology and the Making of the Early Middle Ages Bonnie Effros,2003-03-03 Clothing jewelry animal remains ceramics coins and weaponry are among the artifacts that have been discovered in graves in Gaul dating from the fifth to eighth century Those who have unearthed them from the middle ages to the present have speculated widely on their meaning This authoritative book makes a major contribution to the study of death and burial in late antique and early medieval society with its long overdue systematic discussion of this mortuary evidence Tracing the history of Merovingian archaeology within its cultural and intellectual context for the first time Effros exposes biases and prejudices that have colored previous interpretations of these burial sites and assesses what contemporary archaeology can tell us about the Frankish kingdoms Working at the intersection of history and archaeology and drawing from anthropology and art history Effros emphasizes in particular the effects of historical events and intellectual movements on French and German antiquarian and archaeological studies of these grave goods Her discussion traces the evolution of concepts of nationhood race and culture and shows how these concepts helped shape an understanding of the past Effros then turns to contemporary multidisciplinary methodologies and finds that we are still limited by the types of information that can be readily gleaned from physical and written sources of Merovingian graves For example since material evidence found in the graves of elite families and particularly elite men is more plentiful and noteworthy mortuary goods do not speak as directly to the conditions in which women and the poor lived The clarity and sophistication with which Effros discusses the methods and results of European archaeology is a compelling demonstration of the impact of nationalist ideologies on a single discipline and of the struggle toward the more pluralistic vision that has developed in the post war years

The Making of the Middle Ages Marios Costambeys, Andrew J. Hamer, Martin Heale, 2019 The Making of the Middle Ages arises from a series of lectures organized by the Liverpool Centre of Medieval Studies and is sponsored by the University of Liverpool The following essays largely concerned with the period from the eighteenth century onwards provide a thoughtful consideration on how and when the scientific study of the Middle Ages has had an impact on more popular perceptions and include the work of historians, philologists and students of art, architecture and literature

The Making of the Medieval Middle East Jack Tannous, 2018-12-04 A bold new religious history of the late antique and medieval Middle East that places ordinary Christians at the center of the story In the second half of the first millennium CE the Christian Middle East fractured irreparably into competing churches and Arabs conquered the region setting in motion a process that would lead to its eventual conversion to Islam Jack Tannous argues that key to understanding these dramatic religious transformations are ordinary religious believers often called the simple in late antique and medieval sources Largely agrarian and illiterate these Christians outnumbered Muslims well into the era of the Crusades and yet they have typically been invisible in our understanding of the Middle East's history What did it mean for Christian communities to break apart over theological disagreements that most people could not understand How does our view of the rise of Islam change if we take seriously the fact that Muslims remained a demographic minority for much of the Middle Ages In addressing these and other questions Tannous provides a sweeping reinterpretation of the religious history of the medieval Middle East This provocative book draws on a wealth of Greek, Syriac and Arabic sources to recast these conquered lands as largely Christian ones whose growing Muslim populations are properly understood as converting away from and in competition with the non-Muslim communities around them

The Making of Medieval History G. A. Loud, Martial Staub, 2017 Essays on the discipline of medieval history and its practitioners from the late eighteenth century onwards A hugely interesting set of essays reflecting on a variety of ways in which medieval history has developed to the present time Scholarship of the highest standard, deeply thought provoking and deeply engaged with the inheritances and future tasks of medieval academic history The collection will be essential reading for all medievalists
