Haralson, 2014-01-21 The Encyclopedia of American Poetry The Twentieth Century contains over 400 entries that treat a broad range of individual poets and poems along with many articles devoted to topics schools or periods of American verse in the century Entries fall into three main categories poet entries which provide biographical and cultural contexts for the author's career entries on individual works which offer closer explication of the most resonant poems in the 20th century canon and topical entries which offer analyses of a given period of literary production school thematically constructed category or other verse tradition that historically has been in dialogue with the poetry of the United States

Repression and Recovery Cary Nelson, 1989 A poststructuralist literary history Nelson's premise that the history of modernist culture is one we no longer know we have forgotten and he aims to recover the political questions many forgotten modern poets looked straight in the eye

Sentimental Modernism Suzanne Clark, 1991 Obsession and Release Lee Upton, 1996 This study argues for a new reading of Bogan whose complex position in regard to gender makes her one of the most provocative of the major modernists Lee Upton analyzes the ways in which Bogan's poetry reflects unconscious processes marked by women's experiences and she also explores both the implicit and the explicit violence that the poems embody in their opposition to psychological and social constraints Rather than a repressed poet as she is figured in much contemporary criticism Bogan is seen as self-consciously studying repression in poems of extreme confrontation reflecting an aesthetic of difference and intimating the workings of the unconscious Upton argues that Bogan based her authority on her allegiance to the subversive unconscious rather than on cultural law Upton investigates Bogan's themes of obsession and release among the primary psychic activities that her poetry charts Obsession is portrayed as excessive preoccupation with betrayal in love and psychological engulfment particularly as it is embodied in an unnamed force and culturally positioned to deny the female poet's breath and thus her art In Bogan's allegiance to the lyric the impassioned cry she expressed her desire to understand obsession Increasingly beset by her own imaginative silences after the publication of her third book Bogan sought to dramatize the process of release from obsessive fears of betrayal and entrapment
