

What is the motivation?

It is the interest of the students for their own learning or activities that lead to it. Interest may acquire, maintain or increase depending on intrinsic and extrinsic elements. It must be distinguished from what traditionally has been called in the classroom motivation, which is just what the teacher does to motivate students.

Intrinsic: It consists of personal interests, own abilities, challenges, need no punishments or incentives, it compensates activity itself.

Extrinsic: It consists of interest due to external rewards or benefits that will be achieved when performing a task.

Understanding the Nature of Motivation and Motivating Students through Teaching and Learning in Higher Education David Kember, 2015-11-17. This book is based upon three interrelated open naturalistic studies conducted to better characterise the motivational orientation of students in higher education. Open semi structured individual interviews were conducted with undergraduates students at community colleges and students in taught postgraduate courses in Hong Kong. The analysis used an exploratory grounded theory approach and resulted in a motivational orientation framework with six continua with positive and negative poles. On enrolment students had positions on the six facets of motivation which shifted as they progressed through their degree according to their perceptions of the teaching and learning environment. The framework can therefore be used to explain both initial decisions to enrol and motivation to continue studying. The interviews included descriptions of teaching approaches and learning activities and their effects on motivation. This made it possible to describe a teaching and learning environment conducive to motivation with eight supportive conditions. Each facet of the teaching and learning environment is illustrated with quotations from the three groups of students resulting in a guide to configuring a teaching and learning environment conducive to motivating students. The emerging community college sector in Hong Kong is used as a case study of the effects on student motivation of the expansion of the higher education sector through private colleges. Cultural issues are discussed particularly the performance of Asian students relative to those in the West.

Motivational Design for Learning and Performance John M. Keller, 2009-11-24. It is impossible to control another person's motivation. But much of the instructor's job involves stimulating learner motivation and learning environments should ideally be designed toward this goal. Motivational Design for Learning and Performance introduces readers to the core concepts of motivation and motivational design and applies this knowledge to the design process in a systematic step by step format. The ARCS model is theoretically robust, rooted in best practices and adaptable to a variety of practical uses. It forms the basis of this problem solving approach. Separate chapters cover each component of the model: attention, relevance, confidence and satisfaction, and offer strategies for promoting each one in learners. From there the motivational design process is explained in detail, supplemented by real world examples and ready to use worksheets. The methods are applied to traditional and alternative settings including gifted classes, elementary grades, self directed learning and corporate training. And the book is geared toward the non specialist reader, making it accessible to those without a psychology or teaching background. With this guide the reader learns how to identify motivation problems.
