characteristics to local textures The adapted image prior improves the quality of textures in restored 6 images Sometimes even the content aware image prior may be insufficient for restoring rich textures This issue can be addressed by matching the restored image s gradient distribution to its original image s gradient distribution which is estimated directly from the blurred image This new image deconvolution technique called iterative distribution reweighting IDR improves the visual realism of reconstructed images Subject motion can also cause blur Removing subject motion blur is especially challenging because the blur is often spatially variant In this dissertation we address a restricted class of subject motion blur the subject moves at a constant velocity locally We design a new computational camera that improves the local motion estimation and at the same time reduces the image information loss due to blur
