READY TO LEAD
AFRICA

Namibia, located in southern Africa, gained independence from South Africa on March 21, 1990, after a long struggle against colonial and apartheid rule. Formerly known as South West Africa, the country was a German colony until 1915, when South Africa took control. The fight for independence was led by the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), which engaged in armed resistance against South African rule. International pressure, particularly from the United Nations, played a crucial role in securing Namibia's sovereignty. Sam Nujoma, SWAPO's leader, became the country's first President.
