

1. A BASIC INTRODUCTION TO CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

1.1. The place of the law of criminal procedure in the legal system

The law of criminal procedure is the entire body of rules that prescribes the procedure to follow in punishing criminals by virtue of state authority.

Criminal procedure must, subject to the supremacy of the Constitution:

- provide a process to enforce criminal law;
- allocate power to state officials; and
- articulate fair process norms with reliable outcomes.

1.2. Crime control and due process

Criminal procedure is a system which seeks to incorporate certain fundamental values and balance two conflicting social interests, namely individual freedom and effective crime control. This can be best explained in terms of the following models:

Crime Control Model	Due Process Model
Regards the repression of criminal conduct as the most important function of criminal procedure.	Regards the adherence to rules which duly and properly acknowledge individual rights at every stage of the criminal process as the only ground on which a conviction and sentence can be secured.
Not rival models! Both seek to vindicate the goals of substantive criminal law

No real-life systems conform exactly to one specific model, an appropriate balance must be secured, and there are certain tensions between the underlying values of the two models. Case law illustrates the tension between the two models:

Naidoo 1998 (1) SACR 479 N

The police had obtained incriminating evidence in breach of the constitutional right to privacy. This evidence was excluded on the basis of Section 35(5) and resulted in acquittal of the accused despite the fact that the robbery in question was (at that stage) the 'biggest robbery' in the history of South Africa.
