Paper in the Ecocycle Anders Thorén,1995 Forest History Today ,2000 Suecana extranea ,1996 The Forestry Chronicle ,1998 Compost Science/land Utilization ,1980 American Recycler, May 2008 , TEXINCON. ,1997 BioCycle ,1998 Journal of composting recycling Appita Journal ,1996 FROM WASTE PAPER AND DISCARDED TEXTILES TO BOARD STOCK AN EXPLORATION OF HOUSEHOLD WASTE AS A MATERIAL RESOURCE FOR MAKING. Andrew Lewis Chesakis,2019 Over the last century the wood industry has continually developed ways to recycle waste wood into new and usable materials such as particle board oriented strand board and fiber board Today there are a number of products which utilize waste and use it to produce a variety of building components All of these products express the idea of making more out of less or eco efficiency McDonough Braungart 2002 They also embody the concept of upcycling by taking used or discarded resources and turning them into innovative and useful materials In contrast the consumer and resulting waste culture in the United States has grown significantly since World War II Every year approximately 16 million tons of textile waste and 68 million tons of paper waste are generated in the United States EPA 2018 More than half of the paper waste and less than a quarter of the textile waste is recycled but the remainder still finds its way into landfills EPA 2018 With market trends like fast fashion and planned obsolescence it is no wonder that landfills have become filled to capacity and that we resort to shipping our garbage to other countries With such a plethora of discarded goods trash must be looked at as a resource This thesis explores ways of taking everyday waste products specifically clothing fabrics and waste paper including newspapers kraft paper junk mail and office paper and turning them into new usable material resources Through a process of linking together sheets of paper and fabric and then rolling them through liquid adhesives solid stock flat sheets and formed sheets can be produced This versatile material inspired by wood can be cut drilled sanded machined etc Although this thesis presents a low tech process of fabrication this material has the potential to be made at a range of scales from the DIYer to artisan craftsperson to material manufacturers The resulting product and process of making becomes an upcycled composite stock material which allows the maker to design create and build using waste This thesis addresses the rising trend of consumer waste throughout the 20th and 21st centuries and examines recently developed materials and methods for turning waste into building materials It also explains the processes for making my own material out of waste paper and textiles by going through the phases of development of both material and machines Finally this thesis addresses the versatility and potential applications for the waste composite stock Upcycling Joel Corazon-Vega,2015 Rubbish is waste material that can be found mainly in residential and commercial areas Alachua County offers curbside pick up services for solid waste recycling and yard waste Societies in these days have become more aware of the importance and benefits of recycling The reuse of disposed materials e g paper plastic bottles cans cardboard wood pallets reduces the amount of waste sent to landfills carbon footprints etc The majority of disposed materials have the potential of becoming unconventional construction elements. These materials have undergone through a series of investigations which helped determine their function in the making of shelters. The process of experimentation has led some of these materials to reach a state of constructibility. Paper is a lightweight and versatile material that can effortlessly be transformed. Paper is composed of cellulose pulp that derives from wood, rag, or grass. These fibers are moistened and then pressed together to form the thin material, paper. The United States wastes 71.6 million tons of paper a year, which is 40% of U.S. total waste. The application of paper pulp has been seen in small scales; for instance, Dutch Designer Debbie Wijskamp has applied the use of paper pulp for furniture making. Due to the material properties of cellulose, designers can push the limits of the material.

Paper Or Plastic Dan Imhoff, 2005. The supermarket conundrum: Paper or plastic sums up a Western consumer society that is on a collision course with the planet's life support systems. Do we clear-cut forests, process pulp, and bleach it with chlorine to make paper bags? Or do we make a pact with demon hydrocarbon refining, ancient sunlight into handy plastics? About half of America's municipal solid waste is packaging, at least 300 pounds per person each year, and its upstream costs in energy and resources are even more alarming. In this fascinating look at the world of packaging, author Daniel Imhoff delves into the life cycles of packaging materials from wood products to glass, metals, and plastics, and looks at the countless ways that packaged goods shape our culture. Using case studies, the book explores positive trends such as producer responsibility and take-back laws, the eco design movement, plant-based plastic, labeling to disclose the ecological and social impacts of products, and integrated regional economies that are producing and consuming locally and in bulk. As consumers, there's much we can do to address the still-growing problem of packaging. Paper or Plastic offers a checklist for action, along with resources for detailed information.
