Quantitative Studies in Green and Conservation Criminology Michael J. Lynch, Stephen F.

Pires,2019-07-17 During the early development and throughout the short history of green conservation criminology limited attention has been directed toward quantitative analyses of relevant environmental crime law and justice concerns While recognizing the importance of establishing a theory and terminology in the early stages of development this book redresses this imbalance The work features contributions that undertake empirical quantitative studies of green conservation crime and justice issues by both conservation and green criminologists The collection highlights the shared concerns of these groups within important forms of ecological crime and victimization and illustrates the ways in which these approaches can be undertaken quantitatively It includes quantitative conservation green criminological studies that represent the work of both well established scholars in these fields along with studies by scholars whose works are less well known and who are also contributing to shaping this area of research The book presents a valuable contribution to the areas of Green and Conservation Criminology It will appeal to academics and students working in these areas Research Paper RMRS ,1998

Statistics in Ornithology Byron Morgan,Philip M. North,2012-12-06 The genesis of this volume was in a one day meeting arranged under the auspices of the Nathematical Ecology Group jointly of the British Region of the Biometric Society and the British Ecological Society and held in the Natural History Museum in London on the 4th May 1982 The object of the meeting was to bring together individuals from different disciplines but with a common interest in ornithology In this volume we have tried to preserve the flavour of the meeting so that all but two of the papers read or presented as posters can be found here The two papers that have not been included have since been published elsewhere see Birkhead and Nettleship 1983 and Cav 1983 Further papers have been added to the volume from contributors who were unable to attend the London meeting or were unable to present a paper there All of the papers were refereed by ourselves A volume which contains papers by both statisticians and non statisticians is inevitably going to be variable with regard to the depth and range of statistical techniques used Thus non statisticians are likely to find some of the papers written by statisticians difficult at times and conversely statisticians may find that they would have treated some problems differently from non statisticians It is hoped however that this volume will increase awareness of the interests and problems including solutions in the general area of ornithology and stimulate cross fertilisation of ideas Southwestern Desert Resources William L. Halvorson,Cecil R.

Schwalbe,Charles van Riper,2023-01-10 The southwestern deserts stretch from southeastern California to west Texas and then south to central Mexico The landscape of this region is known as basin and range topography featuring to sky islands of forest rising from the desert lowlands which creates a uniquely diverse ecology The region is further complicated by an international border where governments have caused difficulties for many animal populations This book puts a spotlight on individual research projects which are specific examples of work being done in the area and when they are all brought together to shed a general light of understanding the biological and cultural resources of this vast region so that those same resources can be managed as effectively and efficiently as possible The intent is to show that collaborative efforts among federal state agency university and private sector researchers working with land managers provides better science and better management than when scientists and land managers work independently
