

A dark, moody painting of a winter landscape. In the center, a small, dark cabin with a single lit window sits on a snow-covered hill. The foreground is a dark, textured field of snow and ice. The background is filled with dark, silhouetted evergreen trees under a dark sky. A full moon hangs in the upper left corner, casting a pale glow. The overall atmosphere is somber and atmospheric.

The murder ballad holds a rock solid position in US roots music and the Great American Songbook for decades Telling the stories of sometimes true and often not so true crimes and other horrific events they are raw stories full of unrequited love betrayal life and death The song form stems from the Anglo Saxon ballad tradition where stories were orally passed on to a mostly illiterate population Dutch cartoonist Erik Kriek was inspired by five old and new murder ballads including songs by modern masters such as Nick Cave Steve Earle and Gillian Welch and used them as a launching point for five special and ruthless graphic narratives that dig deep into the darkness of Americana in which guns and religion maintain an uneasy balance
