appeal to young girls and those with an interest in traditional English schooling. Angela Brazil (1868-1947) was an English author most famous for being one of the first writers of modern schoolgirls' stories. Her stories were presented from the characters' point of view and were written primarily as entertainment rather than moral instruction. During the first half of the 20th century, Brazil published nearly 50 such books, with the vast majority being set in English boarding schools. Brazil's work had a significant influence on changing the nature of fiction for girls. Her characters were chiefly young females, active, independent, and aware. Brazil's books were often considered to be immoral and deviant, leading to their being burned or banned by many Headteachers in girls' schools across Britain. Other notable works by this author include The School in the Forest (1944), Three Terms at Uplands (1945), and The School on the Loch (1946). Many vintage books such as these are increasingly scarce and expensive. It is with this in mind that we are republishing this volume now in an affordable modern high quality edition, complete with a specially commissioned new biography of the author.

The warm, mellow September sunshine was streaming over the irregular roofs and twisted chimneys of the little town of Chagmouth, and was glinting on the water in the harbour and sending gleaming, straggling silver lines over the deep reflections of the shipping moored by the side of the jetty. The rising tide, lapping slowly and gently in from the ocean, was floating the boats beached on the shingle, and was gradually driving back the crowd of barefooted children who had ventured out in search of mussels, and was sending them shrieking with mirth, scampering up the seaweed-covered steps that led to the fish market. On the crag top above the town, the corn had been cut.

and harvesters were busy laying the sheaves together in stooks The yellow fields shone in the afternoon light as if the hill were crowned with gold Walking along the narrow cobbled path that led past the harbour and up on to the cliff Mavis and Merle looked at the scene around with that sense of rejoicing proprietorship with which we are wont to revisit the pet place of our adoption It was two whole months since they had been in Chagmouth and as they both considered the little town to be the absolute hub of the universe it was really a great event to find themselves once more in its familiar streets They had spent the summer holidays with their father and mother in the north and had come back to Durracombe just in time for the reopening of school On this first Saturday after their return to Devonshire they had motored with Uncle David to his branch surgery at Chagmouth and were looking forward to several hours of amusement while he visited his patients at the sanatorium Readers who have followed the adventures of Mavis and Merle Ramsay in A Fortunate Term will remember that the sisters on account of Mavis's health had come to live with their great uncle Dr Tremayne at Durracombe where they attended school daily at The Moorings Dr Ramsay their father had decided shortly to leave his practice at Whinburn and go into partnership with Dr Tremayne but the removal to Devonshire could not take place till nearly Christmas so the girls were to spend another term in sole charge of Uncle David Aunt Nellie and Jessop the elderly housekeeper an arrangement which though they were sorry to be parted from their parents pleased them uncommonly well It was a favourite excursion of theirs to accompany their uncle on Saturdays when he motored to visit patients at Chagmouth On these occasions they would have lunch and tea with him at Grimald's Farm where he had his surgery and would spend the intervening time on the seashore or wandering along the cliffs To day tempted by the brilliant sunshine they had brought their bathing costumes towels and tea basket and meant to secure the last dip of the holidays in case the weather should change and further mermaiding should prove impossible They chatted briskly as they climbed the path up the cliff Monitress Merle, Etc
