Multinational Companies And The Trade Unions:

Trade Union Activists, East and West Guglielmo Meardi, 2018-05-08 This title was first published in 2000 This text concerns the transformation of class consciousness It shows that differences between trade union activists from the East and West are not inherited from the past but are socially constructed and that Eastern trade unions are no longer like their Western counterparts as opposed to not yet like them The study concentrates mainly on Italy and Poland with East and West referring to concepts and perceptions rather than as a geographical concern It discovers whether the differences in trade union consciousness are due to the meaning members give a situation or the specificity of the local work settings

International Labour Affairs Burton Bendiner, 1987 Arguing that many multinational corporations establish overseas affiliates solely to escape unionization and take advantage of cheap labor Bendiner assesses the response of the international labor movement to the post World War II expansion of manufacturing multinationals and describes the world organizations that seek to further international cooperation among trade unions The Multinational Corporation, the Nation State, and the Trade Unions Gunnar Hedlund, Lars Otterbeck, 1977 Monograph on the relationship between multinational enterprises government and trade unions in Sweden examines the role of Sweden in international trade and investment policy discusses economic implications of foreign investment foreign owned enterprise and expatriate workers etc And includes survey research results on attitudes of politicians top management and trade union leadership towards future development of multinationals Bibliography pp 163 to 168 diagrams references and statistical tables Trade Unions and Multinational Companies Trades Union Congress, 1984 Multinational Unions Norris Willatt, 1974 Pamphlet on the emerging international trade union movement and its plans for meeting the problems of labour relations in multinational enterprises describes the programmes structure aims and activities of the ICFTU WFTU WCL and etuc and indicates some likely future trends Employee Representation in Multinational Companies Thomas Haipeter, Markus Hertwig, Sophie Rosenbohm, 2018-09-26 Investigating the issue of employee representation in multinational companies MNCs this book sets out to systematically conceptualise the modes of articulation between different action fields While previous studies have focused on forms of employee representation that have emerged throughout recent decades rather little is known about the interaction and coordination of representational bodies and actors such as trade unions and European or World Works Councils Given the growing importance of transnational restructuring in MNCs understanding the conditions under which employees are able to participate in company decision making is a crucial issue Based on empirical case studies and interviews with employee representatives from ten countries across Europe the authors investigate the role of representational bodies in periods of company restructuring Proposing a shift in perspectives in research on transnational labour relations and bringing new insights into structures and practices of employee representation in MNCs this book will be a valuable read for both scholars and practitioners Are Multinational Companies Good for Trade Unions? VV.,2018-11-07T00:00:00+01:00 1529 2 136 Trade Unions and Multinational Companies ,2016 Trade unions face major challenges in developing effective responses to the growing international scope integration and complexity of multinational companies operations There is marked variation in trade unions responses which may be local and national or cross border in nature Focusing on cross border union co operation and action the paper shows that considerations of both structural and institutional contingency and union agency are important in accounting for the marked variation in union responses In examining contingency the paper highlights how a series of institutional and structural factors relating to the national and regional institutional environments in which MNCs are based and where they locate their operations sector of operation and the business structure and strategy of MNCs tend to shape the nature of union responses By exploring the role of agency from two perspectives bottom up and top down the multi level nature of the challenge confronting unions in establishing viable forms of transnational cooperation and action is demonstrated A perceptible shift is underway towards contexts in which local or national responses are no longer adequate or appropriate and towards those which call for cross border initiatives Report on the Meeting of Trade Union Experts on Multinational Companies Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.
