New Nutrients Against Cancer:

Nutrients and Cancer Prevention Kedar N. Prasad, Frank L. Meyskens Jr., 2012-12-06 During the last 10 years the role of specific nutrients in cancer prevention and cancer treatment has been the subject of intense basic preclinical and clinical research. At present the major focus of nutritional oncology is on the mechanisms of carcinogenesis and their modification by nutrients and on cancer prevention studies in animals and humans. Some human epidemiological studies have confirmed the hypothesis developed on animals that there is an inverse relationship between the intake and/or level of 3 carotene, vitamin A, vita min E or vitamin C and the risk of cancer whereas others have shown no such relationship. This is not unexpected since the protective effect of individual nutrients may be too small to be detected by epidemiological methodologies in which a single vitamin or mineral is considered as one variable. Conclusive evidence regarding the role of nutrients in human cancer prevention will come from a well designed human intervention study using one or more nutrients in a population that has a high risk of developing cancer. The involvement of specific nutrients in the regulation of protooncogene expression has just begun. Also some of the results of human intervention trials are beginning to yield interesting results. A large number of international scientists from various disciplines including cell biology, molecular biology, nutritional oncology, epidemiology, and public health reviewed and discussed their most recent findings. The following topics were emphasized:

1. Mechanisms of carcinogenesis
2. History of Soy Nutritional Research (1990-2021) William Shurtleff, Akiko Aoyagi, 2021 The world's most comprehensive, well documented and well illustrated book on this subject. Military Strategies for Sustainment of Nutrition and Immune Function in the Field Institute of Medicine, Committee on Military Nutrition Research, 1999-05-13
Every aspect of immune function and host defense is dependent upon a proper supply and balance of nutrients. Severe malnutrition can cause significant alteration in immune response but even subclinical deficits may be associated with an impaired immune response and an increased risk of infection. Infectious diseases have accounted for more off duty days during major wars than combat wounds or nonbattle injuries. Combined stressors may reduce the normal ability of soldiers to resist pathogens, increase their susceptibility to biological warfare agents and reduce the effectiveness of vaccines intended to protect them. There is also a concern with the inappropriate use of dietary supplements. This book, one of a series, examines the impact of various types of stressors and the role of specific dietary nutrients in maintaining immune function of military personnel in the field. It reviews the impact of compromised nutrition status on immune function, the interaction of health, exercise and stress both physical and psychological in immune function and the role of nutritional supplements and newer biotechnology methods reported to enhance immune function. The first part of the book contains the committee's workshop summary and evaluation of ongoing research by Army scientists on immune status in special forces troops, responses to the Army's questions, conclusions and recommendations. The rest of the book contains papers contributed by workshop speakers.
