Marshall, 2017-10-17 Originally published in 1979 While the theory of non renewable resources under competitive and monopolistic market regimes have been relatively well developed almost no attention has been given to the development of a theoretical framework for analysis of the spectrum of mixed market structure between those extremes The world oil market structure is an example of such an intermediate market structure The purpose of this title is to develop such a theoretical framework The study examines non renewable resource markets in which a profit maximizing producer cartel co exists with a non cartel supply sector which is alternately modelled as consisting of a collection of competitive firms or as exhibiting other exogenously assumed supply behaviours This title will be of interest to students of environmental economics      System Zoo 3 Simulation Models Hartmut Bossel, 2007 About the book Mathematical modeling and computer simulation make it possible to understand and control the dynamic processes taking place in complex systems Simulation provides insights into the often surprising diversity of possible behaviors and allows identifying possibilities for intervention and options for alternative development About one hundred simulation models from all areas of life are fully documented in the three volumes of the System Zoo They can be quickly implemented and easily operated using freely available system dynamics software Volume 3 of the System Zoo contains simulation models of economic and social systems and global development among them production stocks and orders marketing and consumption competition life planning employment ecotax escalation dependence aggression population and community development debt crisis globalization the world models of the Club of Rome by Forrester and the Meadows group and examples of nonnumerical knowledge processing applied to impact assessment and decision processes The System Zoo collection of simulation models is particularly well suited for teaching training and research projects at all levels from high school to university and for individual study Volume 1 of the System Zoo contains simulation models of elementary systems and of systems from the fields of physics and engineering Volume 2 of the System Zoo presents simulation models related to climate vegetation ecosystems and resources About the author Hartmut Bossel is Professor Emeritus of environmental systems analysis He taught for many years at the University of California in Santa Barbara and the University of Kassel Germany where he was director of the Center for Environmental Systems Research until his retirement He holds an engineering degree from the Technical University of Darmstadt and a Ph D degree from the University of California at Berkeley With a background in engineering systems science and mathematical modeling he has led many research projects and future studies in different countries developing computer simulation models and decision support systems in the areas of energy supply policy global dynamics orientation of behavior agricultural policy and forest dynamics and management He has written numerous books on modeling and simulation of dynamic systems social change and future paths and has published widely in the scientific literature in several fields

Comments on Long-term Aspects of Renewable Vs Nonrenewable Resource Substitution, 1980 There are many cases where materials applications involve the use of nonrenewable materials In some instances renewable resources can be substituted for nonrenewable ones in other cases there are no readily feasible renewable resource substitutes for certain nonrenewable materials applications The author points out advantages and limitations of renewable resources as substitutes for nonrenewable resources with particular emphasis on the longer term when economic resources of some of the more limited chemical elements will be starting to run out or will or least become too expensive to use except in absolutely necessary nonsubstitutable uses On the one hand renewable resources will continue to become available through natural processes in some cases augmented by modern technology but only at some maximum level For example the amount of hydroelectric power available in the world is determined by rainfall and topography On the other hand nonrenewable resources are generally regarded as being material sources that once used are gone forever This is certainly true for fossil fuels where current demands are many orders of magnitude larger than rates of formation of new coal and petroleum It is not true however for some of the atmospheric gases e g nitrogen and argon which are returned to the atmosphere either directly or through biological processes after use so that they are truly renewable resources

Non-Renewable Resource Issues Richard Sinding-Larsen,Friedrich-W. Wellmer,2012-03-30 All the solid fuels fossil energy and mineral commodities we use come out of the Earth Modern society is increasingly dependent on mineral and fossil energy sources They differ in availability cost of production and geographical distribution Even if solid fuels fossil energy resources and mineral commodities are non renewable the extracted metals can to a large extent be recycled and used again and again Although the stock of these secondary resources and their use increases the world still needs and will continue to need primary mineral resources for the foreseeable future Growing demands have begun to restrict availability of these resources The Earth is not running out of critical mineral resources at least for the near future but the ability to explore and extract these resources is being restricted in many regions by competing land use as well as political and environmental issues Extraction of natural resources requires a clear focus on sustainable development involving economic environmental and socio cultural aspects Although we do not know what the most important resources will be in 100 years from now we can be quite certain that society will still need energy and a wide range of raw materials. These resources will include oil and gas, coal, uranium, thorium, geothermal, metallic minerals, industrial and specialty minerals including cement, raw materials, rare earth elements. A global approach for assessing the magnitude and future availability of these resources is called for, an approach that with appropriate international collaboration was started within the triennium of the International Year of Planet Earth. Some global mineral resource assessments involving inter-governmental collaboration have already been initiated. The International Year of Planet Earth helped to focus attention on how the geosciences can generate prosperity locally and globally as well as sustainability issues in both developed and developing countries.
