

Simple lighting techniques

Start your projects off with these effective lighting recipes

HIGH CONTRAST LIGHT AT 90°

A horridly results achieved with unmodified light. Using a single flash placed at this angle can create sunburning results, though. The bright and sharp-edged highlights lack texture and create stark shadows and bright highlights. Without a diffuser, the quality of light will be high contrast and if placed near the subject it will create problems with fall-off where light is spread unevenly across the face. By using a reflector, shadows will be deep.

DIFFUSED LIGHT AND REFLECTOR

This is a much better set-up where the same light source is softened with a diffuser and a reflector. Diffusers give their softer effect as daylight cloud covers, spreading light from a single source into larger area. The diffuser will reduce the intensity of your flash unit, so you may need to dial up the output of the flash head, but the effect will be more flattering. The reflector works by bouncing some light back onto the left side of the face.

HIGH CONTRAST LIGHT AT 45°

With a similar effect to the first shot, this type of lighting reveals the hidden side of your subject's face. Placed at 45° to your subject, this kind of light creates strong highlights and deep shadows. Positioned at 45° to the left, acute angles, this light won't pick up as much skin texture, but it won't give the face an army tank of flattening aspect, regardless of the pose. Only one half of the face will be illuminated and, without any reflector, the other half will become a silhouette.

HIGH CONTRAST AT 45° WITH REFLECTOR

A much better blend of lighting set-up that reveals the three-dimensional characteristics of the face. Used in conjunction with a reflector, this can brighten certain reflections, while it won't create a visible difference between the lit and reflected sides of the face. This lighting is in high-contrast, though, so it's not the best choice for a portrait. It's ideal for dramatic lighting, though, as it creates a real shadow power for video portraiture.

LOW CONTRAST AT 45° WITH REFLECTOR

With the addition of a diffuser to the shape of an umbrella, this kind of studio light is much lower contrast than when previous five examples. This creates a longer band of soft-edged light, which makes this portrait much more even across the complexion. The further you move the umbrella sideways, the more a reflector will affect your subject's face. An umbrella will create a subtle softness to a subject and even the potentially off-camera light source of light.

RIM LIGHTING FROM BEHIND

This is the method for emphasising the positive perimeter or shape of your subject's face. In this technique, the subject is not lit from the front, but from behind to create a shadowing rim light effect. Only a single light source is needed and this must be positioned to create a sharp and even light. The perimeter that each frame is creating as a silhouette, opens up the aperture and wider lens, if needed, to capture the light without risk of overexposure or blowing out the subject.
