Livermore National Laboratories National Research Council,Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Committee on Criteria for the Management of Los Alamos and Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories,2004-05-17 In recent years there has been concern about security and operations management at Los Alamos and Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories LANL and LLNL As a result Congress directed the Department of Energy DOE to hold open competitions for the management and operations M O contracts for both LANL and LLNL The quality of the scientific programs however did not appear to be a factor in that action and the DOE s National Nuclear Security Administration NNSA wanted to ensure that the contract competitions preserve the high quality science and engineering currently being performed at the labs It asked the NRC to recommend how best the NNSA can create meaningful qualification and selection discriminators to help ensure world class scientific quality is maintained in programs and activities at LANL and LLNL This report presents those recommendations along with other important factors that should be considered in developing the request for proposals for the upcoming contract competition

Office of Technical Services,1963 House documents ,1889 National Union Catalog ,1956 Includes entries for maps and atlases Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer ,1909 Audit Report, "Fire Protection Deficiencies at Los Alamos National Laboratory." ,2009 The Department of Energy s Los Alamos National Laboratory Los Alamos maintains some of the Nation s most important national security assets including nuclear materials Many of Los Alamos facilities are located in close proximity to one another are occupied by large numbers of contract and Federal employees and support activities ranging from nuclear weapons design to science related activities Safeguarding against fires regardless of origin is essential to protecting employees surrounding communities and national security assets On June 1 2006 Los Alamos National Security LLC LANS became the managing and operating contractor for Los Alamos under contract with the Department s National Nuclear Security Administration NNSA In preparation for assuming its management responsibilities at Los Alamos LANS conducted walk downs of the Laboratory s facilities to identify pre existing deficiencies that could give rise to liability obligation loss or damage The walk downs which identified 812 pre existing fire protection deficiencies were conducted by subject matter professionals including fire protection experts While the Los Alamos Site Office has overall responsibility for the effectiveness of the fire protection program LANS as the Laboratory s operating contractor has a major day to day role in minimizing fire related risks The issue of fire protection at Los Alamos is more than theoretical In May 2000 the Cerro Grande fire burned about 43 000 acres including 7 700 acres of Laboratory property Due to the risk posed by fire to the Laboratory s facilities workforce and surrounding communities we initiated this audit to determine whether pre existing fire protection deficiencies had been addressed Our review disclosed that LANS had not resolved many of the fire protection deficiencies that had been identified in early 2006 1 Of the 296 pre existing deficiencies we selected for audit 174 59 percent had not been corrected and 2 A substantial portion of the uncorrected deficiencies 86 49 percent were considered by the walk down teams to be significant enough to warrant compensatory actions until the deficiency was corrected or was tracked to closure through implementation of corrective actions Further we found that 32 of the significant deficiencies had been closed by the previous Los Alamos contractor prior to LANS assuming responsibility for operation of the Laboratory even though the deficiencies had not been corrected A fire protection expert provided technical support during the audit As an example of uncorrected problems LANS had not resolved by performing periodic tests a deficiency identified in 2006 regarding a kitchen hood fire suppression system in a facility located within the Los Alamos Neutron Science Center Such systems are required to be tested twice a year by the National Fire Protection Association standard a standard that had been adopted by Department of Energy under DOE Order 420 1B Yet in 2006 the LANS walk down team recognized that this system had not been inspected since May 2004 and noted that deficient suppression systems could result in significantly high levels of property damage and loss After we brought this issue to management's attention on February 6 2009 LANS officials stated that the Laboratory would correct this deficiency As with the problems involving the fire suppression system we observed that LANS had not always corrected life safety deficiencies involving building exits at one of its primary facilities This included providing a secondary emergency exit for a building with occupants on multiple floor levels LANS had removed personnel from the third floor and improved the sprinkler system of the facility but it had still not provided a secondary exit for personnel on the second floor by the time we completed our review NNSA has since stated that this fire protection issue will be completely addressed by relocating personnel from the second floor Perhaps most serious our testing revealed that a number of deficiencies were formally closed even though actual corrective action had not been completed Notably we observed that action had not been taken to resolve a recommendation to replace a fire alarm panel found to be unreliable After the walk down was conducted but prior to contract transition the former contractor closed the recommendation in its action tracking database even though the panel had not been replaced The walk down team had categorized the fire alarm system as requiring replacement since it had been modified many times was old and obsolete and had very limited available spare parts In fact the walk down team concluded that the panel must be considered to be unreliable and should have a very high priority for replacement The Journal of the Senate During the ...
