Acting with Power Deborah H. Gruenfeld,2020 There is so much we get wrong about power This eye opening look at the true nature of power explores who has it what it looks like and the role it plays in our lives Grounded in over two decades worth of scientific research and inspired by the popular class of the same name at Stanford s Graduate School of Business Acting with Power offers a new and eye opening paradigm that overturns everything we thought we knew about the nature of power Although we all feel powerless sometimes we have more power than we tend to believe That s because power exists in every relationship by virtue of the roles we play in others lives But it isn t a function of status or hierarchy Rather it s about how much we are needed and the degree to which we fulfill our responsibilities Power isn t a tool for self enhancement or a resource for personal consumption It s a part you play in someone else s story We often assume that power flows to those with the loudest voice or the most commanding presence in the room But in fact true power is often much quieter and more deferential than we realize Moreover it s not just how much power we have but how we use it that determines how powerful we actually are Actors aren t the only ones who play roles for a living We all make choices about how to use the power that comes with our given circumstances We aren t always cast in the roles we desire or the ones we feel prepared to play Some of us struggle to step up and be taken more seriously while others have trouble standing back and ceding the spotlight Some of us are used to hearing we are too aggressive while others are constantly being told we are too nice Gruenfeld shows how we can all get more comfortable with power by adopting an actor s mindset We all know what it looks like to use power badly This book is about how to use power well affectionate and robustly written portrayal of a mother son relationship very relatable Diana Evans Driven by a deep seated desire to understand his mother s life before he was born Derek Owusu offers a powerful imagining of her journey As she moves from Ghana to the UK and navigates parenthood in a strange and often lonely environment the effects of her displacement are felt across generations Told through the eyes of both mother and son Losing the Plot is at once emotionally raw and playful as Owusu experiments with form to piece together the immigrant experience and explore how the stories we share and tell ourselves are just as vital as the ones we don t Crime Fiction and National Identities in the Global Age Julie H. Kim,2020-05-25 To read a crime novel today largely simulates the exercise of reading newspapers or watching the news The speed and frequency with which today s bestselling works of crime fiction are produced allow them to mirror and dissect nearly contemporaneous socio political events and conflicts This collection examines this phenomenon and offers original critical essays on how national identity appears in international crime fiction in the age of populism and globalization These essays address topics such as the array of competing nationalisms in Europe Indian secularism versus Hindu communalism the populist rhetoric tinged with misogyny or homophobia in the United States racial religious or ethnic others who are sidelined in political appeals to dominant native voices and the increasing economic chasm between a rich and poor More broadly these essays inquire into themes such as how national identity and various conceptions of masculinity are woven together how dominant native cultures interact with migrant and colonized cultures to explore insider outsider paradigms and identity politics and how generic and cultural boundaries are repeatedly crossed in postcolonial detective fiction

Losing the Plot Pardis Dabashi,2023-11-06 An examination of the relationship between literature and classical Hollywood cinema reveals a profound longing for plot in modernist fiction The modernist novel sought to escape what Virginia Woolf called the tyranny of plot Yet even as twentieth century writers pushed against the constraints of plot driven Victorian novels plot kept its hold on them through the influence of another medium the cinema Focusing on the novels of Nella Larsen Djuna Barnes and William Faulkner writers known for their affinities and connections to classical Hollywood Pardis Dabashi links the moviegoing practices of these writers to the tensions between the formal properties of their novels and the characters in them Even when they did not feature outright happy endings classical Hollywood films often provided satisfying formal resolutions and promoted normative social and political values Watching these films modernist authors were reminded of what they were leaving behind both formally and in the name of aesthetic experimentalism by losing the plot
