Claude Monet (1840-1926) Claude Monet, Joseph Baillio, 2007 Monet Painting in His Garden at Argenteuil Pierre A. Renoir, Claude Monet Nina Kalitina, Nathalia Brodskaya, 2012-01-17 For Claude Monet the designation impressionist always remained a source of pride In spite of all the things critics have written about his work Monet continued to be a true impressionist to the end of his very long life He was so by deep conviction and for his Impressionism he may have sacrificed many other opportunities that his enormous talent held out to him Monet did not paint classical compositions with figures and he did not become a portraitist although his professional training included those skills He chose a single genre for himself landscape painting and in that he achieved a degree of perfection none of his contemporaries managed to attain Yet the little boy began by drawing caricatures Boudin advised Monet to stop doing caricatures and to take up landscapes instead The sea the sky animals people and trees are beautiful in the exact state in which nature created them surrounded by air and light Indeed it was Boudin who passed on to Monet his conviction of the importance of working in the open air which Monet would in turn transmit to his impressionist friends Monet did not want to enrol at the Ecole des Beaux Arts He chose to attend a private school L'Académie Suisse established by an ex model on the Quai d'Orfèvres near the Pont Saint Michel One could draw and paint from a live model there for a modest fee This was where Monet met the future impressionist Camille Pissarro Later in Gleyre's studio Monet met Auguste Renoir Alfred Sisley and Frédéric Bazille Monet considered it very important that Boudin be introduced to his new friends He also told his friends of another painter he had found in Normandy This was the remarkable Dutchman Jongkind His landscapes were saturated with colour and their sincerity at times even their naivety was combined with subtle observation of the Normandy shore's variable nature. At this time Monet's landscapes were not yet characterized by great richness of colour. Rather they recalled the tonalities of paintings by the Barbizon artists and Boudin's seascapes. He composed a range of colour based on yellow, brown or blue-grey. At the Third Impressionist Exhibition in 1877 Monet presented a series of paintings for the first time, seven views of the Saint Lazare train station. He selected them from among twelve he had painted at the station. This motif in Monet's work is in line not only with Manet's Chemin de fer (The Railway) and with his own landscapes featuring trains and stations at Argenteuil but also with a trend that surfaced after the railways first began to appear. In 1883 Monet had bought a house in the village of Giverny near the little town of Vernon. At Giverny series painting became one of his chief working procedures. Meadows became his permanent workplace. When a journalist who had come from l'Éveil to interview Monet asked him where his studio was, the painter answered: 'My studio? I've never had a studio and I can't see why one would lock oneself up in a room. To draw yes to paint no.' Then broadly gesturing towards the Seine, the hills and the silhouette of the little town he declared: 'There's my real studio.' Monet began to go to London in the last decade of the nineteenth century. He began all his London paintings working directly from nature but completed many of them afterwards at Giverny. The series formed an indivisible whole and the painter had to work on all his canvases at one time. A friend of Monet's, the writer Octave Mirbeau, wrote that he had accomplished a miracle. With the help of colours he had succeeded in recreating on the canvas something almost impossible to capture: he was reproducing sunlight, enriching it with an infinite number of reflections. Alone among the impressionists, Claude Monet took an almost scientific study of the possibilities of colour to its limits; it is unlikely that one could have gone any further in that direction.

Monet, Claude Monet, 1996-04-04. Art lovers and students of art history will find this sophisticated book an inspirational celebration of art and artist. In this volume the works and thoughts of the great Impressionist Claude Monet are explored: 60 illustrations, 45 in color.

Claude Monet the Artist's Garden in Argenteuil, Pomegranate Communications, Incorporated, 2005-04-01. Monet, John House, 1991. Impressionism took its name from the title of a painting that Claude Monet (1840-1926) exhibited in 1874. More than any other artist, Monet was the creator of the Impressionist vision, which has so forcefully shaped the way in which we habitually see nature today. For sixty years he continuously explored ways of translating his experiences into paint in pictures that take us from the bustling life of Paris in the 1860s to the seclusion of his own water garden, which he painted in his last years. John House's introduction to Monet's life and work presents a sequence of dazzling illustrations that chart the artist's progress as he became increasingly preoccupied with colour and atmospheric effect and the direct studies of nature gave way to paintings of greater richness and harmony in which the play of varied colours replaced the conventional drawing and modelling of forms.

Monet, Christoph Heinrich, 2000. Monet was the most typical and the most individual Impressionist painter. But while the painter was faithful and persevering in the pursuit of his motifs, his personal life followed a more restless course. Parisian by birth, he discovered painting as a youth in the provinces where one of his homes Argenteuil has come to represent the artistic flowering and official establishment of Impressionism as a movement     November 24, 1873, the Precise Moment of Impressionism Charles Merrill Mount,1973     Monet Yvon Taillandier,1963 Discusses highlights of the French painter s career and his relationship with his predecessors and other artists of his time 51 full color plates and 27 in two colors

Claude Monet: Wild Poppies, Near Argenteuil (Foiled Journal) Flame Tree Studio,2020-10-27 Part of a series of exciting and luxurious Flame Tree Notebooks Combining high quality production with magnificent fine art the covers are printed on foil in five colours embossed then foil stamped And they re powerfully practical a pocket at the back for receipts and scraps two bookmarks and a solid magnetic side flap     Claude Monet, Le Pont Du Chemin de Fer À Argenteuil ,2008
