

Monterey Formation

- The Monterey Bay was formed during the Miocene Era in between 16 and 6 million years ago during a period where the Earth was cooling down (The Mighty Monterey Formation, 2012)
- Coastal upwelling happened all around the California coast due to the great current system reorganizing itself.
- Diatoms, a single celled algae, collected on the bottom of the sea. Their silica-shelled bodies were preserved on the zero oxygen sea bed turning them into petroleum, oil and gas. (The Mighty Monterey Formation, 2012)
- At the same time, their shells turned into quartz.
- The rocks changed from Diatomite to porcellanite and later into chert. As the rock changed, room was given for the oil to move around.
- The San Andreas fault system bent the rock into domes and folds creating reservoirs for the oil. (Monterey Shale, 2013)

The Deposition of Organic-carbon-rich Sediments Nicholas Bennett Harris, 2005 Depositional models for organic carbon rich sediments have been the subjects of both great interest and great controversy for many years These sediments serve as the ultimate source of virtually all oil and gas They also represent the interface between biological and geological processes and provide critical evidence for the state of the atmosphere and oceans Yet despite their importance and decades of research the origin of these sediments remains the source of vigorous disagreement The twelve papers in this volume represent the cutting edge of research in this topic They explore the origin of organic carbon rich sediments through a variety of techniques including sedimentology geochemistry paleontology and computer modeling All papers take multidisciplinary approaches to the topic and together they demonstrate the complex interconnected processes that trigger the deposition of organic carbon This book will appeal to geoscientists in many disciplines including explorers for petroleum who need models for source rock deposition organic and inorganic geochemists who study processes in water and sediment sedimentologists who interpret ancient deposition environments and climatologists and oceanographers who reconstruct the behavior of the ancient atmosphere and oceans
