Excerpt from The Lost Empires of the Modern World Essays in Imperial History The world is continually being reminded that in the arts of empire the English are mere plagiarists stupid plagiarists who have spoilt what they have stolen They have not so it is affirmed one single original or admirable quality They were not great discoverers like the Portuguese or a great Christianizing power like the Spaniards They have not the art of conciliating natives like the French nor even of making themselves beloved by their own colonists They have not even the wits to make their empire pay like the Dutch They roll up everywhere mountains of debt they extort only that they may squander About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
