M. Crean,1985 Histoire Sociale ,1997 1967, the Last Good Year Pierre Berton,1997 Few Canadians over the age of forty can forget the feeling of joy and celebration that washed over the country during Canada's centennial year We were Pierre Berton reminds us a nation in love with itself basking in the warm glow of international applause brought on by the unexpected success of Expo 67 and pumped up by the year long birthday party that had us all warbling Ca na da as Bobby Gimby and his gaggle of small children pranced down the byways of the nation It was a turning point year a watershed year a year of beginnings as well as endings One royal commission finally came to a close with a warning about the need for a new approach to Quebec Another was launched to investigate for the first time the status of Canadian women New attitudes to divorce and homosexuality were enshrined in law A charismatic figure Pierre Elliott Trudeau made clear that the state had no place in the bedrooms of the nation The seeds of Women's Lib Gay Pride and even Red Power were sown in the centennial year Of all the pavilions on the Expo site Berton singles out the Indian pavilion as having the greatest impact The country was in a ferment that year Canadians worried about the Americanization of every institution from the political convention to Hockey Night in Canada People talked about the Generation Gap as thousands of flower children held love ins in city parks The government tried to respond by launching the Company of Young Canadians a project that was less than successful The most significant event of 1967 was Charles de Gaulle's notorious Vive le Quebec libre speech in Montreal It gave the burgeoning separatist movement a new legitimacy enhanced by Rene Levesque's departure from the Liberal party later that year Throughout the book the author gives us insightful profiles of some of the significant figures of 1967 the centennial activists Judy LaMarsh and John Fisher the Expo entrepreneurs Philippe de Gaspé Beaubien and Edward Churchill Walter Gordon the fervent nationalist and his rival Mitchell Sharp Lester Pearson and his bete noire John Diefenbaker the three men of the world who helped make Canada internationally famous Marshall McLuhan Glenn Gould and Roy Thomson hippie leaders like David dePoe American draft dodgers like Mark Satin women's activists like Doris Anderson and Laura Sabia youth workers like Barbara Hall radicals like Pierre Vallières author of White Niggers of America and such dedicated nationalists as Madame Chaput Rolland and Andre Laurendeau In spite of the feeling of exultation that marked the centennial year an opposite sentiment runs through the book like dark thread the growing fear that the country was facing its gravest crisis Berton points out that we are far better off today than we were in 1967 Then why all the hand wringing he asks Because of the very real fear that the country we celebrated so joyously thirty years ago is in the process of falling apart In that sense 1967 was the last good year before all Canadians began to be concerned about the future of our country End of the Line Maria Bohuslawsky,1989 Canada has one of the highest rates of institutionalization of elderly people in the world As the population ages the number of elderly

Canadians in nursing homes will grow by leaps and bounds In End of the Line Maria Bohuslawsky offers a detailed look at Canada's nursing homes focusing both on the institutions themselves and on the people inside them Through sketches of nursing home residents and their families as well as nursing home staff she paints a picture of the homes that leaves nothing unexplored First published in 1989 End of the Line remains a timely and provocative examination of the quality of care experienced by senior citizens in Canada's nursing homes Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal, 1944 When in Doubt, Do Both Kay Macpherson, 1994 From their meetings Macpherson and her colleagues moved into the streets into Parliament and eventually into history with one of the most important achievements for Canadian women in the twentieth century the celebrated equality clause in the Constitution of 1982 The Canadian Author, 1932 Hey Ma!
