Montessori's Handbook Maria Montessori, James Zimmerhoff, 2017-06-21

Montessori education is an educational approach created by Italian physician and educator Dr. Maria Montessori. Montessori realized many of her ideas while working with mentally challenged children in her first school, La Casa Dei Bambini, that was opened to working-class children in the poor neighborhood of San Lorenzo in Rome. Her method, characterized by freedom within limits, emphasizes independence and respect for a child's natural physical, psychological, and social development. Despite a range of practices, the name Montessori, the Association Montessori Internationale (AMI), and also the American Montessori Society (AMS) cite these elements as essential. Mixed-age classrooms for students ages 30 months or 3 to 6 years old are the most common by far, but 0-3, 3-6, 6-9, 9-12, 12-15, and 15-18 year-old classrooms exist also. Student choice of pursuit from within a prescribed array of options, uninterrupted segments of work time (ideally three hours), a discovery model where students learn notions from working with materials rather than by direct education, specialized pedagogical materials developed by Montessori and her collaborators, freedom of movement within the classroom, and a trained Montessori teacher.

Dr. Montessori moved forward with her plan to study medicine. She appealed to Guido Baccelli, the teacher of clinical medicine at the University of Rome, but was actively discouraged. Nonetheless, in 1890 she enlisted in the University of Rome in a qualification course in natural sciences, succeeding examinations in botany, anatomy, zoology, experimental physics, histology, and general and organic chemistry, and receiving her diploma di licenza in 1892. This degree, with additional studies in Italian and Latin qualified her for entrance into the medical program at the University in 1893
