Medieval Romance and Material Culture Nicholas Perkins, 2015 Studies of how the physical manifests itself in medieval romance and medieval romances as objects themselves Medieval romance narratives glitter with the material objects that were valued and exchanged in late medieval society lovers rings and warriors swords holy relics and desirable or corrupted bodies Romance however is also a genre in which such objects make meaning on numerous levels and not always in predictable ways These new essays examine from diverse perspectives how romances respond to material culture but also show how romance as a genre helps to constitute and transmit that culture Focusing on romances circulating in Britain and Ireland between the twelfth and sixteenth centuries individual chapters address such questions as the relationship between objects and protagonists in romance narrative the materiality of male and female bodies the interaction between visual and verbal representations of romance poetic form and manuscript textuality and how a nineteenth century edition of medieval romances provoked artists to homage and satire

Empire of Magic Geraldine Heng, 2003 Empire of Magic offers a genesis and genealogy for medieval romance and the King Arthur legend through the history of Europe's encounters with the East in crusades travel missionizing and empire formation It also produces definitions of race and nation for the medieval period and posits that the Middle Ages and medieval fantasies of race and religion have recently returned Drawing on feminist and gender theory as well as cultural analyses of race class and colonialism this provocative book revises our understanding of the beginnings of the nine hundred year old cultural genre we call romance as well as the King Arthur legend Geraldine Heng argues that romance arose in the twelfth century as a cultural response to the trauma and horror of taboo acts in particular the cannibalism committed by crusaders on the bodies of Muslim enemies in Syria during the First Crusade From such encounters with the East Heng suggests sprang the fantastical episodes featuring King Arthur in Geoffrey of Monmouth's chronicle The History of the Kings of England a work where history and fantasy collide and merge each into the other inventing crucial new examples and models for romances to come After locating the rise of romance and Arthurian legend in the contact zones of East and West Heng demonstrates the adaptability of romance and its key role in the genesis of an English national identity Discussing Jews women children and sexuality in works like the romance of Richard Lionheart stories of the saintly Constance Arthurian chivalric literature the legend of Prester John and travel narratives Heng shows how fantasy enabled audiences to work through issues of communal identity race color class and alternative sexualities in socially sanctioned and safe modes of cultural discussion in which pleasure not anxiety was paramount Romance also engaged with the threat of modernity in the late medieval period as economic social and technological transformations occurred and awareness grew of a vastly enlarged world beyond Europe one encompassing India China and Africa Finally Heng posits romance locates England and Europe within an empire of magic and knowledge that surveys the world and makes it intelligible usable for the future Empire of Magic is expansive in scope spanning the eleventh to the fifteenth centuries and detailed in coverage examining various types of romance historical national popular chivalric family and travel romances among others to see how cultural fantasy responds to changing crises pressures and demands in a number of different ways Boldly controversial theoretically sophisticated and historically rooted Empire of Magic is a dramatic restaging of the role romance played in the culture of a period and world in ways that suggest how cultural fantasy still functions for us today

Women's Power in Late Medieval Romance Amy Noelle Vines, 2011 A reading of how women's power is asserted and demonstrated in the popular medieval genre of romance The cultural and social power of women in the Middle Ages is perhaps hard to trace with evidence for it scarce This book argues that medieval romances provide a central but under explored source for and examples of such authority By reassessing the influence exerted by female characters in a spectrum that includes both intellectual and chivalric aid and in some cases patronage it considers how they functioned as models of cultural intellectual and social authority in medieval literary texts In addition to examples set by the family connections socio political networks and textual communities in which they lived this study argues that women also learned methods of influence from the books they read In texts like Troilus and Criseyde and Partonope of Blois the female reader encounters an explicit demonstration of how a woman's intellectual and financial resources can be used The literary representations of women's cultural power expose a continuum of influence from non material effects to material sway in the medieval patronage system an influence often unacknowledged in strictly historical and extra literary sources Amy N Vines is Assistant Professor in the Department of English University of North Carolina Greensboro
