Historical Works from Medieval Wales is the fourth volume in The Library of Medieval Welsh Literature series It introduces readers to the genre of medieval Welsh historical texts on the basis of a broad selection of annotated passages which range from an account of the legendary origin of Britain to the fall of the last native prince Each passage is preceded by an introductory paragraph indicating the source and relating it to its wider historical and literary context The selections are accompanied by a substantial introduction extensive linguistic notes and a full glossary The introduction discusses general features of medieval historiography as well as the manuscripts and edited works from which the excerpts have been taken The second part of the introduction contains a detailed description of the language orthography morphology and syntax employed in the selected passages The volume aims to make Middle Welsh historical texts accessible to third level students whose first language is not Welsh but can also be used and enjoyed by native speakers of Welsh students and interested readers who are interested in an overall view of historical texts from medieval Wales Patricia Williams is a retired lecturer in Welsh language and literature at the University of Manchester    Arthurian Literature XXI Ceridwen Lloyd-Morgan, 2004 A special number devoted to Celtic material This special number of the well established series Arthurian Literature is devoted to Celtic material Contributions from leading experts in Celtic Studies cover Welsh Irish and Breton material from medieval texts to oral traditions surviving into modern times The volume reflects current trends and new approaches in this field whilst also making available in English material hitherto inaccessible to those with no reading knowledge of the Celtic languages CERIDWEN LLOYD MORGAN has published widely in the field of Arthurian studies She is currently Honorary Research Fellow in the School of Welsh Cardiff University    The Legal Triads of Medieval Wales Sara Elin Roberts, 2007 Medieval Wales had a separate system of law to that found in England and the law has been preserved in several medieval manuscripts Whilst the purpose of the law manuscripts was to lay down the legal complexities of the era what has been preserved can also be read as fascinating literature in medieval Welsh An important element to the law manuscripts is the large collections of legal triads lists of threes probably composed for educational mnemonic purposes which offer a real insight into the workings of medieval Welsh law The Legal Triads of Medieval Wales is a new study and the first full exploration into the legal triads among the largest collections of triads found in Welsh covering almost every aspect of medieval Welsh law Each triad is set in its literary and legal context with a full edited text translation and notes for each triad found in the law manuscripts Book Jacket    The Medieval Welsh Law Manuscripts Lauris Ture Olson, 1985

The Mabinogion Lady Charlotte Guest,2007-08 The Mabinogion is a collection of prose stories from medieval Welsh manuscripts They are partly based on early medieval historical events but almost certainly hark back to older Iron Age traditions Its name comes from a misunderstanding made by the Mabinogion's first English translator Lady Charlotte Guest she found at the end of the first tale the form mabynnogyon a scribal error that was assumed to be the plural of the Welsh word mabinogi which occurs correctly at the end of the remaining three of the Four Branches The word mabinogi itself is something of a puzzle although it is ultimately related to the Welsh mab which means son boy Professor Eric P Hamp however suggests that mabinogi derives from the name of the Celtic deity Maponos the Divine Son and originally referred to materials pertaining to that god Strictly speaking Mabinogi applies only to the Four Branches see below which are speculated to have derived from older tradition Each of these four tales ends with a colophon meaning thus ends this branch of the Mabinogi in various spellings hence the name

Early Medieval Welsh Book-production Nicholas Hart Webb,1996 The dissertation re examines all the manuscripts and fragments surviving from Wales which can be dated within the period ca 800 to ca 1100 After consideration of some of the causes for the paucity of manuscripts the introductory chapter reviews the relevant past research It is suggested that in their effort to obtain satisfactory criteria for identification scholars have treated the previous accounts of Welsh handwriting too dogmatically The last collective survey of the manuscripts was made in 1912 In the second chapter the manuscripts are given detailed codicological and palaeographical descriptions They are grouped in two loose categories Credlbilia and Dubla according to the degree of certainty attached to their attribution to Wales or Cornwall Seventeen items from the two areas belong to the first category six to the second The Cornish specimens of handwriting which can be identified on evidence of their texts provide a palaeographical control for the Welsh manuscripts English influence is more noticeable in Cornish handwriting whereas for the Welsh scripts the comparisons are closest with specimens from Ireland Chapter three describes some of the general developments in Insular script during the same period The script fared differently in the writing provinces of England and Ireland In the period before ca 800 there is a noticeable amount of stylistic exchange and overlap between the two cultural provinces This is less apparent after that date In particular the English scriptoria adapted Continental methods of preparation and writing to an extent not found in Ireland The Welsh material is compared with the manuscripts from England and Ireland The close relationship between Irish and Welsh handwriting enables us to plot the likely developments in both countries in greater detail particularly during the tenth and eleventh centuries

Classical Literature and Learning in Medieval Irish Narrative Ralph O'Connor, 2014 This edited volume will make a major contribution to our appreciation of the importance of classical literature and learning in medieval Ireland and particularly to our understanding of its role in shaping the content structure and transmission of medieval Irish narrative Dr Kevin Murray Department of Early and Medieval Irish University College Cork From the tenth century onwards Irish scholars adapted Latin epics and legendary histories into the Irish language including the Imtheachta Aeniasa the earliest known adaptation of Virgil's Aeneid into any European vernacular Togail Tro a grand epic reworking of the decidedly prosaic history of the fall of Troy attributed to Dares Phrygius and at the other extreme the remarkable Merugud Uilixis meic Leirtis a fable like retelling of Ulysses's homecoming boiled down to a few hundred lines of lapidary prose Both the Latin originals and their Irish adaptations had a profound impact on the ways in which Irish authors wrote narratives about their own legendary past notably the great saga T in B Cailnge The Cattle Raid of Cooley The essays in this book explore the ways in which these Latin texts and techniques were used They are unified by a conviction that classical learning and literature were central to the culture of medieval Irish storytelling but precisely how this relationship played out is a matter of ongoing debate As a result they engage in dialogue with each other using methods drawn from a wide range of disciplines philology classical studies comparative literature translation studies and folkloristics Ralph O'Connor is Professor in the Literature and Culture of Britain Ireland and Iceland at the University of Aberdeen Contributors
