The Antiquaries Journal, 2003 The Cathedrals of England: Southern England Nikolaus Pevsner, Priscilla Metcalf, 1985 Examines Anglican and Roman Catholic cathedrals from Norman ruins to modern edifices and describes the history and background of each diocesan cathedral in southern England The Cathedrals of England: Midland, eastern, and northern England Nikolaus Pevsner, Priscilla Metcalf, 1985 The World Upside-down Christa Grössinger, 1997 This book describes and illustrates one of the most entertaining popular art forms of the Middle Ages the misericord the carved hinged seat of the choir stall found in monastic and parish churches and in cathedrals These ledges were introduced as a concession to elderly and frail monks who found it difficult to stand through the eight daily Offices In the course of time they were decorated and eventually extensively carved with narrative scenes English misericords have their own distinctive style and express a particular sense of humour Intended as antidotes to the rigorous celibate life of the monks they depict unrestrained and often bawdy subject matter and present an explicit and frank expression of the unmentionable Most of the surviving misericords are from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries though a few earlier ones are to be found some in London and Cambridge are from the sixteenth century and have distinctly Renaissance qualities Exceptionally fine series are to be found in Exeter

Lincoln Manchester Worcester Ripon and Wells Cathedral but many excellent examples can be seen in parish churches all over the country The book is richly illustrated from new specially taken photographs with full descriptive captions and a map of the locations of misericords mentioned It will act as companion to students of medieval art and society and to all those interested in the popular arts that can still be seen in our own time The History of Architecture Mary A. Liminal Images Alex Woodcock,2005 The presence of unusual grotesque and rude carvings on ecclesiastical buildings have been explained in a number of ways from reflecting the warped sense of humour of the masons to a purely ornamental or marginal function However in this study of medieval sculpture from southern England Alex Woodcock suggests that imagery should be seen in the same way as the buildings themselves as liminal spaces mediating between the human mortal world and the sacred and unknown In examining various distorted and foliate heads grotesques mythical creatures beasts and so on Woodcock argues that these are wholly appropriate images for medieval religious life reflecting the ambiguous and the unclassifiable in an unknown realm whilst also having an apotropaic function Placing emphasis on liminality the study focuses in particular on heads severed foliate and otherwise and whole figures humans animals and hybrids including
