Meditations On African Literature:

Meditations on African Literature Dubem Okafor, 2001-02-28 While African literature is presently enjoying much attention from the scholarly community its heritage and identity are becoming less clearly defined While Africa has a rich oral tradition African writers find themselves writing in the languages of their colonial oppressors So too many of the best African writers now live outside Africa particularly in North America Much of the criticism of African literature is written by American professors African writers sometimes teach their literature at American universities and American publishers issue African literary works At the same time the political climate of many African countries has been detrimental to literacy and writing This book explores many of the issues currently facing African literature Each chapter is written by an expert contributor to provide the volume with a broad coverage of numerous topics related to the present state of African literature The opening chapters examine issues of language and postcoloniality in African literary works Later chapters discuss such concerns as the formation of an African literary canon representations of history and ideology in African writing the role of women in African literature and African ritual theater Through its various chapters the volume makes clear that African writers continue to engage pressing social and political issues and that they are intellectuals rather than entertainers

of early contacts and colonial developments Under Western Eyes chapters on Black Consciousness manifest in the debates over Panafricanism and Negritude a group of essays on mental decolonization expressed in Black Power texts at the time of independence struggles and finally Comparative Vistas sketching directions that future comparative study might explore An introductory essay stresses the millennia of writing in Africa side by side with a richly eloquent and artistic set of vernacular oral traditions written and oral traditions have become interwoven in adaptations of imported forms and linguistic innovations that challenge traditional high literary norms G rard uses the mathematical concept of fuzzy sets to explain why the focus on Black Africa has led him to set aside for future analysis the literatures produced in North Africa which fall under the influence of Muslim civilization as well as the diasporic literatures of the New World Over sixty scholars from twenty two countries contribute specialized studies of creative writing by leading authors in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries such as Achebe Mphahlele Ngugi Senghor Soyinka and Tutuola Critical analyses are organized primarily around regions reflecting different colonial languages imposed through schools and other social institutions Some authors trace the adaptation of western genres others identify syncretism with folktales or myths The volumes are attentive to the heterogeneity of national literatures addressed to polyethnic and multilingual populations and they note the instrumental politics of language in newly independent states A closing chapter Tasks Ahead identifies areas for future scholars to explore Abuja Journal of Humanities, 1996 Something Rich and Strange Sue Hosking, Susan Hosking, 2009 Beaches are places of contact, play, confrontation, and friction. First comers always arrive on a beach. After Europeans moved into the Antipodes, the coast was the first frontier to be defined. Flinders' circumnavigation in 1802 had mapped Australia, revealing the land as gift by sea. As the national anthem continues to remind us, all kinds of ideas about the coast, beaches, sea changes, holiday places, and islands swirl and eddy in this unique collection of writing.
