Christopher W. Totten

Meditative Spaces:

Meditative Spaces Michael Freeman, 2005 The need to reflect, contemplate and concentrate is an essential counterpoint to the rush of daily life and its surface details. This has been recognized since ancient times and meditation in one form or another has been practiced through the centuries and across cultures for reasons both sacred and mundane. In the modern world the motivations are more likely to be personal than religious but the same dynamics apply in calming and focusing the mind. A prerequisite is the right physical space somewhere to help set one's frame of mind and to hold back the distractions of the outside. Specifically for the purpose of meditation the examples are from sources as varied and fascinating as contemporary Japanese tea ceremony rooms, minimalist Western architecture, idiosyncratic chapels, artists and writers' workspaces and portable tented structures. The principles are all applicable to modern living whether permanent or temporary at home or in beautiful natural settings. With its crisp photography and inventive design Meditative Spaces will appeal to a variety of readers from architecture enthusiasts to those with an interest in Japanese style to anyone looking to find and celebrate serenity in today's hectic and rapidly paced world.

Throughout the text you will learn skills for spatial layout evoking emotion through gamespaces and creating better levels through architectural theory. FEATURES Presents case studies that offer insight on modern level design practices methods and tools. Presents perspectives from industry designers, independent game developers, scientists, psychologists and academics. Explores how historical structures can teach us about good level design. Shows how to use space to guide or elicit emotion from players. Includes chapter exercises that encourage you to use principles from the chapter in digital prototypes, playtesting sessions, paper mock ups and design journals.
