Medieval Household:

Medieval Households David Herlihy, 1985-01-01 How should the medieval family be characterized Who formed the household and what were the ties of kinship law and affection that bound the members together David Herlihy explores these questions from ancient Greece to the households of fifteenth century Tuscany to provide a broad new interpretation of family life In a series of bold hypotheses he presents his ideas about the emergence of a distinctive medieval household and its transformation over a thousand years Ancient societies lacked the concept of the family as a moral unit and displayed an extraordinary variety of living arrangements from the huge palaces of the rich to the hovels of the slaves Not until the seventh and eighth centuries did families take on a more standard form as a result of the congruence of material circumstances ideological pressures and the force of cultural norms By the eleventh century families had acquired a characteristic kinship organization first visible among elites and then spreading to other classes From an indifferent network of descent through either male or female lines evolved the new concept of patrilineage or descent and inheritance through the male line For the first time a clear set of emotional ties linked family members It is the author's singular contribution to show how as they evolved from their heritages of either barbarian society or classical antiquity medieval households developed commensurable forms distinctive ties of kindred and a tighter moral and emotional unity to produce the family as we know it Herlihy's range of sources is prodigious ancient Roman and Greek authors Aquinas Augustine archives of monasteries sermons of saints civil and canon law inquisitorial records civil registers charters censuses and surveys wills marriage certificates birth records and more This well written book will be the starting point for all future studies of medieval domestic life

Medieval Domesticity Fordham University. Center for Medieval Studies. Annual Conference, 2008-12-18 Leading scholars shed new light on what home meant to men and women in medieval England Women, Identities and Communities in Early Modern Europe Stephanie Tarbin, Susan Broomhall, 2016-12-05 Addressing a key challenge facing feminist scholars today this volume explores the tensions between shared gender identity and the myriad social differences structuring women's lives. By examining historical experiences of early modern women the authors of these essays consider the possibilities for commonalities and the forces dividing women. They analyse individual and collective identities of early modern women tracing the web of power relations emerging from women's social interactions and contemporary understandings of femininity. Essays range from the late medieval period to the eighteenth century, study women in England, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy and Sweden and locate women in a variety of social environments from household neighbourhood and parish to city, court and nation. Despite differing local contexts the volume highlights continuities in women's experiences and the gendering of power relations across the early modern world. Recognizing the critical power of gender to structure identities and experiences this collection responds to the challenge of the complexity of early modern women's lives. In paying attention to the contexts in which women identified with other women or were seen by others to identify contributors add new depth to our understanding of early modern women's senses of exclusion and belonging.

Bodies and Disciplines Barbara Hanawalt, David Wallace, 1996-01-01. Brings the insights of cultural studies to medieval studies. Centered on practices of the body human bodies the body politic. Bodies and Disciplines considers a fascinating and largely uncanonical group of texts as well as public dramas, rituals and spectacles from multidisciplinary perspectives. These essays consider the way the human body is subjected to educational discipline to corporate celebration and to the production of gendered identity through the experiences of marriage and childbirth. Among the topics explored are the theatrics of punishment including legal mutilation, the representation of the body of Christ as social ritual, adolescent misbehavior and its treatment and conflicting ecclesiastical and lay models of sexual behavior. The contributors also trace the definition of poor, foreign and dissident bodies examining private and public issues surrounding social identities. The result is a volume that incorporates insights from history, literature, medieval studies and critical theory drawing from the strengths of each discipline to illuminate a relatively little studied period. Insightful and momentous. Bodies and Disciplines marks an important intervention in the development of cultural studies of late medieval England. Contributors: Sarah Beckwith (U of Pittsburgh), Rita Copeland (U of Minnesota), Gail McMurray Gibson (Davidson College), Ralph Hanna III (U of California, Riverside), Felicity Heal (Oxford U), Ruth Mazo Karras (Temple U), Seth Lerer (Stanford U), Marjorie K McIntosh (U of Colorado, Boulder), Miri Rubin (Oxford U), Paul Strohm (Indiana U). M. Woolgar, Christopher Michael Woolgar, 1999-01-01 In the later medieval centuries a whole range of important social, political and artistic activities took place against the backdrop of the great English households. In this vividly illuminating book C. M. Woolgar explores the details of life in these great houses. Based on an extensive investigation of household accounts and related primary documents he examines the daily routines, the weekly and annual patterns and the life cycle observances of birth, childhood, marriage, death and burial. This comprehensive exploration connects the culinary dots between Roman kitchens and medieval European cooking traditions, demonstrating how ancient wisdom often parallels contemporary nutritional science. Through careful examination of historical sources including Apicius's Roman cookbook and monastery records, the book uncovers the remarkable sophistication of traditional food preparation methods. The narrative progresses chronologically from 100 BCE to 1500 CE, examining specific techniques such as fermentation and preservation methods that shaped regional cuisines. Drawing from archaeological evidence, preserved food remains and documented recipe collections, the book presents compelling insights into how historical societies developed effective cooking methods through practical experience. One particularly intriguing aspect is how many traditional cooking techniques naturally preserved nutrients and promoted dietary balance achievements that modern science now validates through research. What sets this work apart is its interdisciplinary approach, weaving together archaeology, nutrition science and cultural anthropology to create a comprehensive understanding of historical gastronomy While maintaining academic rigor the book remains accessible to both culinary professionals and home cooks offering practical applications for modern kitchens Rather than simply romanticizing the past it provides objective analysis of traditional cooking methods supported by evidence from food historians and nutritional anthropologists making it an invaluable resource for anyone interested in the intersection of culinary history and modern cooking practices
