Medieval Farming And Technology:

Medieval Farming and Technology Grenville G. Astill, John Langdon, 1997 This is the first of three planned volumes which deal with the techniques and technology of agriculture in Europe in the period from 600 A D down to the 17th century. The focus of this first volume is Scandinavia the British Isles Northern Germany the Low Countries and Northern France. The volume discusses methodological approaches and their limitations the development of medieval agriculture in terms of the transmission of technological ideas improvements in productivity regional variations social responses to agricultural technology and those common trends that unite the Northwest European region. The volume integrates material derived from the great advances made in medieval archaeology and the historical study of landscapes during the past 30 years and has a supranational character. It will be of interest to all those working on the social economic and political history of Northwest Europe in the medieval and early modern periods as well as to those undertaking research in the specific field of the history of technology. Technology and Change in History This new series of scholarly surveys is intended to offer an updating of the discussion of questions regarding the nature of technology and technological change first broached in the nine volume survey by R Forbes Studies in Ancient Technology. The series will however take in not only the original scope of Forbes work namely the Ancient Near East and the Greco Roman world but will extend beyond this to cover the medieval and early modern periods. The volumes in the series will be in English of 300-800 pp divided into 10-15 topical chapters and aim to present to scholars graduate students and to non specialist scholars the current state of knowledge in the various fields in the history of technology. They collect assimilate and present facts opinion sources and literature in the accessible way that Forbes did but will also identify issues that have not been plainly addressed and will in doing so indicate where the field might profitably be going. Including notes and numerous illustrations the volumes address questions of a primarily historical nature such as 1 what technological options were open to peoples at different times and different places 2 what options did they choose and why 3 what impact did this have on their contemporaries and successors and on their technological choices. Questions and problems more proper to political social and economic history will also be touched upon but the starting point and focus of this new series is the history of technology. Volumes planned in the series include R J Curtis Food Technology in Antiquity 1999 M C Deprez Masson and N J Mayhew eds Metal Technology 600-1800 A D 2001 P Squatriti ed Medieval Hydrotechnology 2001 O Wikander ed Ancient Water Technology 1998 G R H Wright Ancient Building Technology 1999 J Langdon and G Astill eds Agrarian Technology in the Middle Ages Northwest Europe 1996 Medieval Farming and Technology : the Impact of Agricultural Change in Northwest Europe John Langdon, 1997 Agriculture in the Middle Ages Del Sweeney, 2016-11-11 Explores the cultural framework within which changes in agricultural technology and economic organization occur and the ways in which changes in the social fabric influence attitudes toward rural work and the peasantry Medieval Science, Technology, and Medicine Thomas F. Glick, Steven John Livesey, Faith Wallis, 2005

Animals, Economy and Status

Richard Thomas,2005 This volume charts the changing human animal relationship at one particular location Dudley Castle West Midlands over several centuries The temporal span considered the 11th 18th centuries is arguably one of the most formative in the evolving relationship between humans and animals. The period was one of profound economic, social and demographic change, witnessing not only the evolution of modern breeds of domestic animals but also a change in the way animals were perceived and treated. In this study, the animal bones recovered from archaeological excavations at Dudley Castle have been integrated with historical documentation to provide a basis from which to explore these issues. The size of the faunal assemblage, its chronology and location combine to make the results of this analysis invaluable in enhancing our current state of knowledge. Just as human-animal relationships in the period reflected a combination of economic, social and cultural values, so the questions addressed in this volume reflect this diversity and inter-connectivity at a number of different scales. Thus site-specific questions as well as broader trends within the social and economic landscape of the medieval and post-medieval periods in England are considered. This study also attempts to explore dietary patterns on site and the way in which the acquisition and consumption of food was used in the negotiation of social relationships. Science and Technology in the Middle Ages Joanne Findon, Marsha Groves, 2005. Long referred to as the Dark Ages, the Middle Ages was actually a period of great scientific and technological advancement. In agriculture, the inventions of the heavy plow, horseshoes and harnesses made farming easier. Children will enjoy following the advancements in medicine, military weapons, astronomy and astrology up until 1500.

The Archaeology of Medieval Europe: Eighth to twelfth centuries AD

James Graham-Campbell, Magdalena Valor, 2007. The two volumes of The Archaeology of Medieval Europe will together comprise the first complete account of medieval archaeology across Europe. Archaeologists from academic institutions in fifteen countries are collaborating to produce these two books of sixteen thematic chapters each. In addition, every chapter will feature a number of box texts by specialist contributors highlighting sites or themes of particular importance. The books will be comprehensively illustrated throughout in both colour and b/w, including line drawings and specially commissioned maps. This ground-breaking set, which is divided chronologically into two Vol 1 (extending from the Eighth to Twelfth Centuries AD) and Vol 2 (from the Twelfth to Sixteenth Centuries) to appear 2008, will enable readers to track the development of different cultures and of regional characteristics throughout the full extent of medieval Catholic Europe. In addition to revealing shared contexts and technological developments, the complete work will also provide the opportunity for demonstrating the differences that were inevitably present across the Continent from Iceland to Italy and from Portugal to Finland and to study why such differences existed.

Internal Colonization in Medieval Europe

Felipe Fernández-Armesto, James Muldoon, 2008. Around the year 1000, Rodulfus Glaber described France as being in the throes of a building boom. He may have been the first writer to perceive the early medieval period as a Dark Age that was ending to be replaced by a better world. This book discusses the ways in which this transformation took place. Imperfect Institutions Thráinn Eggertsson, 2009-10-27. The emergence of New Institutional Economics toward the end of the twentieth century profoundly changed our ideas about the organization of economic systems and their social and political foundations. Imperfect

Institutions explores recent developments in this field and pushes the discussion forward by allowing for incomplete knowledge of social systems and unexpected system dynamics and above all by focusing explicitly on institutional policy Empirical studies extending from Africa to Iceland are cited in support of the theoretical argument In Imperfect Institutions Thrunn Eggertsson extends his attempt to integrate and develop the new field that began with his acclaimed Economic Behavior and Institutions 1990 which has been translated into six languages This latest work analyzes why institutions that create relative economic backwardness emerge and persist and considers the possibilities and limits of institutional reform Thrunn Eggertsson is Professor of Economics at the University of Iceland and Global Distinguished Professor of Politics at New York University Previously published works include Economic Behavior and Institutions 1990 and Empirical Studies in Institutional Change with Lee Alston and Douglass North 1996

Neo-Confucianism and Science in Korea Sang-ho

Ro,2021-02-15 Historians of late premodern Korea have tended to regard it as a hermit kingdom isolated from its neighbours and the wider world In fact as Ro argues in this book Korean intellectuals were heavily influenced by both Chinese Neo Confucianism and the European Enlightenment in the late 18th and 19th centuries In the late Choson period the regime felt threatened by the new more empirical approaches to knowledge emerging from both the East and the West For this reason many Korean intellectuals felt it necessary to work in the shadows and formed secret societies for the study of nature Because of the secrecy of these societies much of their work has remained unknown even in Korea until recent years Ho looks at the work of these intellectuals and analyses the impact their thinking and experimentation had on knowledge production in Korea A fascinating insight into the largely overlooked story of how globalization affected intellectual life in Korea before the 20th century This book will be of great interest to students and researchers of Korean history and of Asian intellectual history more broadly

A Hertfordshire Demesne of Westminster Abbey Derek Vincent Stern,2000

This pioneering contribution to the economic history of medieval England focuses on the Hertfordshire demesne farm of Kinsbourne later Herpendenbury and questions whether the farm's periods of economic success and failure were due to human factors or to the forces of nature Originally written as a doctoral thesis in 1978 the history has now been edited and published as a memorial to its author who died in 1993 The detailed study is based on the meticulous analysis of numerous primary sources which the author concludes suggest that the weather had little impact on the efficiency or otherwise of the manor's management accountancy or exploitation of the market A lengthy introduction places the work within the context of meteorological debate and regional history
